Humid Heat Of 96 Due Again Today; It May Rain

Dank Tuesday's Toll 8 Overcome And 13,000 Sent Home From Offices

For the sixth time this summer and the second consecutive day the mercury hit 96 degrees yesterday.

High point was reached at 3:55 p. m., when the relative humidity was 42 per cent.

One person was in Emergency Hospital in serious condition from heat prostration.

Three other heat cases were treated in hospitals, and four by ambulance attendants throughout the city.

A prospect of relief today was given by the Weather Bureau, whic hsaid thundershowers might fall in the late afternoon and early evening.

More than 13,000 District and Federal workers were sent home in midafternoon.

Previous 96 degree record days were June 26, July 5, 6, 22 and 25.

In serious condition in Emergency Hospital is Samuel Woods, 55, of 229 8th st. se. Woods, an employe of Capital Transit's Grace st. nw. garage, collapsed at work shortly after 4:30 p. m. yesterday. He lapsed into unconsciousness after arrival at the hospital. His condition was described as "grave."

The three victims treated at hospitals were released soon. They were:

Edward N. Thomas, 56, of 1518 8th st. nw., a laborer, who collapsed shortly after noon at a building project in the 2400 block of K st. nw. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

George Durant, 24, of 1824 S st. nw., treated at Gallinger after fainting in the 1300 block of H st. ne.

William Dorsey, 34, of 4535 Eades pl. ne., taken to Georgetown Hospital after being felled by heat near the hospital.

In addition, four other persons were reported by the ambulance dispatcher at Municipal Center as treated on the scene.

Capital Transit Co. reported several streetcars stalled by "swelling" of the slotlines between the rails, causing the underground trolleys to stick.

For the second consecutive day a huge hot air mass drove in on the city from the Midwest and billowed into Virginia, Maryland and other Atlantic States.

Hottest places in Virginia were Danville and Norfolk, where 97 degrees was registered shortly before 4 p. m.

Maryland temperatures ranged from 92 to 95 degrees.

Northern New York State cooled to 85 degrees, but the southern part of the State was crisped in 90-plus temperatures.

Cumberland, Md., cooled off by a sudden rainfall, enjoyed a brief respite. The temperature dropped from 92 to 75 but climbed swiftly back to 94 degrees after the shower.

Not all the Nation sweltered. In Texas heavy rain was reported, causing damage of one million dollars. Wisconsin and Minnesota had thundershowers and, in the Far West, light rains fell in Oregon and Washington. Florida also experienced slight precipitation.

The forecaster held out a slight hope of relief. "So slight, I hate to mention it," he said.

Showers Thursday, he thought, maybe.

Senate Puts Curb On RFC Employes

A bill barring Reconstruction Finance Corporation employes from taking jobs with business firms who got loans with their approval was passed by the Senate last night. The measure now goes to the House.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) said the measure would bar any employe who "exercised discretion" on such loans from going to work for the borrower for two years after the loan was granted.

Tax Collectors Plan to Hunt D. C. Evaders

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Apartment dwellers who fail to file a District personal property tax return by this weekend may find a collector on their trail.

The warning came last night from Assistant Tax Assessor James L. Martin. He served flat notice that the city's cliff dwellers—the largest group of tax evaders—will be the next target of a District-wide canvass.

To avoid a 20 per cent additional tax bill, you must deliver your personal property tax form to Room 215 at District Building not later than 4:45 p. m. Friday. But you can get under the wire by mailing your return to the same address if it is postmarked not later than midnight Sunday.

Martin says taxpayers should not worry too much about having their tax forms notarized as the printed instructions direct.

"We do not contest returns that haven't been notarized because we feel the people will be just as honest with a simple signature," said Martin. "Notarization is a nuisance and an archaic tax procedure which we hope to change soon."

Martin also suggests that you don't just pull a figure out of the hat to state the value of your household effects, jewelry and other items. He and his staff, through long experience, have a pretty fair idea of the value of your personal property.

The personal property tax division has worked out a table showing what it considers the reasonable evaluation that home owners should place on jewelry and household effects. The yardstick is based on the assessed value of homes, less land.

Martin gave The Washington Post a few samples of typical re-

Big Annuity Is News to Ehrhorn

New York, July 26 (NYHT).—Oscar W. Ehrhorn, a former Federal referee in bankruptcy, admitted today he had applied for a civil service pension, but denied he knew he was eligible for a $17,000 annuity on a $7.43 payment into the civil service retirement fund.

Ehrhorn said he did not know if he was the employe who may receive the benefits which may eventually total $150,000 as reported by the House Civil Service Committee in Washington Friday.

Jerry Kluttz wrote in his column in The Washington Post that the employe mentioned by the report had worked in the office of Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.), during December, 1948. Ehrhorn admitted he worked for Macy at that time and a deduction was made from his salary for a pension payment.

Science Foundation Recommended by AEC

The Atomic Energy Commission yesterday recommended the creation of a national science foundation to "rescue" government research from a "stepchild" position.

David E. Lilienthal, chairman, made this recommendation in replying to a request from Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) for the commission's views.

The commission is now financing a scientific research fellowship program administered for it by the National Research Council.

House Passes Poll Tax Ban For 5th Time

After an angry debate, the House passed an antipoll tax bill yesterday, 273 to 116.

It would outlaw the poll tax as a requirement for voting in primary and general elections in which Federal officeholders are chosen.

The measure, the first item of President Truman's civil rights program to be acted on at this session of Congress, now goes to the Senate. Opponents are confident it will be pigeonholed or filibustered to death if any move is made to take it up there. Four times previously the House had passed similar bills, only to see them die in the Senate.

Southerners fought the bill bitterly in the House, saying such measures encourage the rise of the Ku Klux Klan. Northerners replied that the poll tax disfranchises large masses of people and enables "narrow, bigoted" men to control some Southern States. Opponents argued in vain that if the poll tax is to be outlawed it should be done by constitutional amendment. They failed, 266 to 123, to send the bill back to committee so a constitutional amendment could be substituted for it.

The bill says the imposition of a poll tax as a voting prerequisite is "an interference" with elections and "an impairment of the republican form of government."

Auchincloss Asks House Heads To Pass D. C. Home Rule Bill

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) yesterday called on the House majority leadership to carry out President Truman's request for prompt action on Washington home rule.

Auchincloss, leader of the drive for a home rule bill in the last Congress, called the House's attention to the President's request that the home rule measure be sent him to sign into law before Congress adjourns.

He also pointed out that the House District chairman had inserted in the Congressional Record the appeal of the Washington Board of Trade not to approve the home rule bill unless it is coupled with a national representation provision.

"The Washington Board of Trade has been consistently opposed to allowing the residents of the District to vote for a local council to manage their affairs, and their attitude is difficult to understand," said Auchincloss.

"Any people in this great free country who are taxed for the expenses of their Government should

Cement Men To Go Out Thursday

Drivers of Dump Vehicles Accept Offer, Averting Stoppage Today

One truckers' strike facing the Washington construction industry was averted last night but another was voted for Thursday.

The ready-mix cement truck drivers turned down a management wage offer in a meeting last night and scheduled a strike which, if it goes on, could have wide effect on construction projects here.

Projects affected would include the Dupont Circle underpass, the General Accounting Office construction, the Georgetown underpass, as well as many apartment buildings now going up.

Possibility of an offer today from the employers was seen by Charles Bell, president of Local 639, AFL Teamsters, but as of last night he said he expected the strike to go on at 6:45 a. m. Thursday.

The ready-mix cement drivers are asking a 15-cent increase retroactive to May 15 over their present wage of $1.35 an hour. They turned down last night the employers' offer for a two-year-contract to date from July 11 and to include either a 5-cent increase this year and another 5-cent increase next year, or a straight 7½-cent increase for the two years.

The dump truck drivers, another affiliate of Local 639, last night voted to accept a 16-cent offer made by the Dump Truck Operators Association, thus averting a strike scheduled for 7 a. m. today.

The drivers had originally sought 32 cents and the employers had offered 10. The 16-cent-an-hour settlement upped the drivers' wage from the old scale of $1.18 to $1.43 an hour.

Power Is Asked To Seize Docks In Hawaii Strike

Honolulu, July 26 (U.P.).—Governor Stainback today asked a special session of the Hawaiian Legislature for power to seize the islands' docks and handle all stevedoring activities to end the tie-up of Hawaii's economy by the CIO Longshoremen's strike.

Addressing a joint meeting of both houses shortly after the session convened this morning, Stainback told the legislators that the government "must insure continued operation of shipping."

He continued:

"For those who see in the government operation of our piers and longshore activity a threat to private enterprise, I submit that there is a far greater threat to private enterprise in this territory if these operations are not immediately resumed and kept functioning."

"On the other hand, for those who challenge the government operation as a method of union-busting, I point out that the welfare of a half-million people is more important than the interests of a relatively small group of workers."

Barkley Laughs at Wonder Over Widow's St. Louis Party

By The Associated Press

Vice President Barkley said yesterday he had "a swell time" when he stopped over on a plane flight from Minneapolis Sunday for luncheon in St. Louis as the guest of an attractive widow. Several other persons attended the luncheon.

"I don't know why people are wondering about it," Barkley, who is 71 and a widower, said, adding with a wide smile:

"I violated no law of legislation, society or propriety, and I had a swell time."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat reported that guests said the affair for the Vice President "was supposed to be sort of secret."

The widow Barkley stopped to see is Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley, whose husband died in 1945. He was a railroad attorney. Friends said Mrs. Hadley, an attractive brunette, met the Vice President in Washington recently through Clark Clifford of the President's staff.

Plans to Cut Military Aid Developing

Republicans Active In Foreign Affairs Deny Intention of Backing Substitute

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Strong moves to cut back the $1,450,000,000 foreign military aid program developed yesterday on Capitol Hill.

However, reports that Republicans active in bi-partisan foreign policy were planning to bring in a substitute arms proposal for a small outlay, were denied by those said to be involved.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, chief Republican foreign policy spokesman, meanwhile, was believed to have urged that the Administration resubmit the program at a far lower interim figure, while Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) openly called for such action.

An Administration official said that redrafting the program is "out of the question."

"This is an interim program already," he said, "at a carefully calculated figure."

Prefer to Await Hearings

As far as any Republican counter-measure is concerned, program officials indicated they feel it unreasonable to contemplate such action until the proposed plan is explained in hearings.

When the arms plan—sent to Congress only Monday—is backed up by testimony, and details of Europe's defense position and Russia's armed might are presented in executive sessions, much of the opposition to the program will disappear, one official predicted.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee is scheduled to open hearings on the legislation Thursday, while Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) said the bill will be "wide open" to changes in the Senate.

Solves Jurisdiction Dispute

After a meeting of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee yesterday, Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), majority leader, forecast that the Senate bill will be assigned to the Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees.

He said members of both committees would have equal voting authority on the bill and joint hearings would be held. This unusual action would solve the Senate's jurisdictional dispute over the legislation.

Representative John M. Vorys (R., Ohio), a member of the House Foreign Affaris Committee, suggested that five members of the House Armed Services Committee should be permitted to join in the House hearings.

Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) rejected that proposal.

Early yesterday, it was reported that Senators Vandenberg and John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), and Representative Vorys, all of whom favor some measure of arms aid,

Dutch Housewife Quits Channel Try After 14 Hours

Dover, England, July 26 (U.P.).—Mrs. Willy Cross van Rijsel, 175-pound Dutch housewife who had hoped to set a new record for swimming the English Channel, gave up tonight, a mile and a half from the Dover cliffs.

Mrs. van Rijsel, who discarded her bathing suit at Cap Gris Nez, France, had been in the water for 14 hours and 16 minutes.

Cold despite 25 pounds of grease smeared on her body, and exhausted by the choppy waves and a ground swell, she had to be pulled into the boat.

Gertrude Ederle was the first woman to swim the 20-mile stretch, covering the distance in 14 hours, 31 minutes, in 1926.

British Seek 624 Millions More in Aid

By Stephen White

Paris, July 26 (NYHT.).—Britain has notified the Organiation for European Economic Cooperation that unless her share of Marshall Plan aid is increased by 624 million dollars during 1949-1950, her economic recovery will be endangered.

If the British demand is met OEEC will turn over to Britain a total of $1,547,000,000 in Marshall aid during the current fiscal year, or nearly 42 per cent of the $3,700,000,000 the American Congress is expected to vote for all Europe. In raising its request from 923 million dollars to $1,547,000,000, Britain seeks to increase its share by more than two-thirds.

It would correspondingly slash drastically the amounts available for each of the other 18 participating countries. Since all these countries presumably have already

Atlantic Union Plan Launched In Congress

6-Nation Meeting For Exploration of Possibilities Urged

A convention of the six nations sponsoring the North Atlantic Pact, to explore the possibility of organizing a "free, federal union" of democratic countries was proposed concurrently yesterday in the House and Senate.

As the Atlantic union move got under way, another group of Senators joined in a resolution looking to the strengthening of the United Nations into a "world federation." Some Senators signed both resolutions.

18 Senators Back It

Eighteen Senators, representing a geographic and political cross-section of the United States, joined in the Atlantic union resolution presented to the Senate by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.).

Four members of the House introduced identical resolutions requesting the President to invite pact sponsors to name delegates representing their principal political parties to meet with representatives of our own.

The proposed Atlantic Union Convention, patterned after the 1787 Federal convention of our 13 original States, would "explore how far their peoples, and the peoples of such other democracies as the convention may invite to send delegates, can apply among them, within the framework of the United Nations" our own Federal Union principle.

"Logical Next Step"

Together with Owen J. Roberts, former justice, president of the Atlantic Union Committee, and Clarence Streit, who has long plugged for the union-now principle, the cosponsors participated in a press conference on the resolution. They described it as "a logical next step" in American foreign policy.

Beside Kefauver, these other Senators cosponsored the Atlantic union resolution: George (D., Ga.), Baldwin (R., Conn.), Cain (R., Wash.), Chapman (D., Ky.), Ecton (R., Mont.), Fulbright (D., Ark.), Frear (D., Del.), Gillette (D., Iowa), Hendrickson (R., N. J.), Hill (D., Ala.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.), Maybank (D., S. C.), McCarthy (R., Wis.), Miller (D., Idaho), Sparkman (D., Ala.), Thye (R., Minn.), and Withers (D., Ky.)

These Congressmen introduced identical resolutions in the House: Boggs (D., La.), Judd (R., Minn.),

Senate Vote Of 41 to 37 Restores ECA Cut

Action Assures Hoffman of Full Amount He Sought For '49 Fiscal Year

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate last night, after a touch-and-go floor battle, voted to restore a retroactive cut of 74 million dollars in last quarter Marshall Plan funds.

The vote was 41 to 37. As a result, ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman was assured the full $1,074,000,000 he asked for the last three months of the 1949 fiscal year, but faced a sharp slash in 1950 ECA appropriations.

Senate approval of the Appropriations Committee's $419,820,000 reduction in second-year Marshall Plan funds was taken for granted after the Senate Democratic policy committee tossed in the towel.

Shortly before the Senate vote, Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told newsmen the leadership would insist on restoration of the 74-million-dollar last quarter cut, but would "go along" with the 10 per cent 1950 ECA slash.

Vandenberg Supports Move

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and other GOP supporters of ECA had taken the same stand. Last night Vandenberg joined Lucas in the sharp floor fight to restore the last quarter cut and won by the narrow four-vote margin.

The bipartisan alignment will continue today when ECA supporters concede the balance of the Marshall Plan cut but link forces to wipe out a string of "crippling" legislative amendments.

Reading a letter from ECA Administrator Hoffman, Vandenberg led the fight to put back the retroactive ECA cut. He argued Hoffman was forced to "commit" the entire sum due to Senate slow motion on money bills.

"He can't suspend operations, just because we suspend operations," said the Michigan Republican.

Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) appealed to the Senate to stand by the committee and not restore the sum. He argued Hoffman had no legal right to allocate the fund before its actual appropriation by Congress.

Plans Months In Advance

Vandenberg replied that the House committee and the full House had approved the full $1,074,000,000 Hoffman asked for the last quarter, and that he used this as "the only chart available" to guide him.

Pointing out that ECA has to plan months in advance, he said Hoffman had not actually spent the money but had been forced to make commitments that would create "serious complications" if withdrawn. He said the committee took no testimony on the cut, and did not give Hoffman a chance to state his side.

Moscow Accuses Tito of Torturing 31 USSR Citizens

London, July 26 (AP).—The Moscow Radio said tonight a Soviet note to Yugoslavia accused Marshal Tito's government of arresting 31 Russian citizens, subjecting them to "flogging and all kinds of insults and dooming them to starvation.

"The real reasons for the repressive measures to which Yugoslav authorities are subjecting Soviet citizens," the broadcast said, "is not that they committed any crime but merely that Yugoslav authorities regard them as supporting friendly relations between the peoples of Yugoslavia and those of the Soviet Union."

The note said the Soviet Embassy in Belgrade "insists on the immediate cessation of the arbitrary regime for Soviet citizens and on the immediate release from prison of all Soviet citizens who have been illegally detained in Yugoslav prisons."

The note added the Soviet citizens had been "tortured" and reduced to "exhaustion."

Pound Dogs 'Experiment' Bill Opposed 2-1 by Subcommittee

A Senate District subcommittee has decided two to one against a bill to authorize the District to turn over unclaimed animals at the Pound to reputable educational and scientific organizations for experimental purposes.

District Chairman J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) said yesterday he and Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) have decided to oppose the bill, while Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.) favors it.

McGrath introduced the bill as District chairman, but made clear at the time he was doing it as a matter of procedure, and was not indorsing the bill.

The measure was supported generally by doctors and sharply attacked by antivivisection organizations at hearings.

McGrath said that after studying the bill he felt that it would not meet the problem, and that the overwhelming sentiment of the people here would be against it.

He said he felt the matter should be studied further, with special attention to the possibility of operating the Pound not as a District agency, but under the control of a humane society.

He said the bill will be presented to the full District Committee with the adverse 2 to 1 report.

Fists Fly in French Debate Over Pact

On British Shore

Third Parley On A-Secrets Set Today

Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) announced yesterday that a third high policy conference on sharing atomic secrets with Britain and Canada will be held in the Capitol at 2:30 p. m. today.

The chairman of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Committee said in a brief statement that the group will meet with Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Johnson "to continue its consideration of foreign relations in the field of atomic energy."

The first conference was held July 14 at Blair House when President Truman called the congressional, military, state and atomic leaders to a highly secret discussion of the problem.

This was followed by a larger meeting July 20 at the Capitol, the details of which also have been kept secret.

Paris, July 26 (U.P.).—A free-for-all among punching, shouting deputies broke out on the floor of the National Assembly today, temporarily halting debate on ratification of the North Atlantic Pact.

The scuffle started during the closing stages of the marathon debate which began Friday night. It was expected the pact would be ratified by an overwhelming majority, with only the Communists in opposition, late tonight or in the early hours Wednesday.

Tired, and short-tempered after a five-day battle of words, the French lawmakers began throwing punches and continued fighting for 15 minutes in the lobbies after Assembly President Edouard Herriot suspended the session.

Police reported no serious injuries, but spectacles were broken, eyes were blacked and noses were bloodied in the tumult.

The fighting flared while Edmond Michelet, a rightist, had the floor. Michelet, interned in a Nazi concentration camp during the war, had lashed out at the Communists. Greeted by cat-calls, he reminded the Communists they had met him with wreaths and decorations after the war.

Yves Peron, a husky Red, and two others rushed at Michelet and began throwing punches. Within moments the entire floor was a mad scramble of punching, yelling men.

The 90-degree heat and the combatants' lack of condition finally halted the fracas.

were considering a counter proposal.

This was said to include up to 500 million dollars to 600 million dollars cash outlay for Greece, Turkey and western European members of the North Atlantic Treaty, as contrasted with the Administration's proposed $1,450,000,000 spending on a global basis.

The same substitute measure reportedly included the 450 million dollars worth of arms from "excess" reserves which is charged to the President's plan for only 77 million dollars for rehabilitating the equipment.

All three Republicans, however, denied they now propose an alternative bill or have any specific figures in mind.

Senator Vandenberg said, "I don't think it's my place to come forward with a bill now."

He said he told the State Department the "facts of life," that Congress would not accept the program as drafted.

Sen. Dulles conferred with Secretary of State Acheson at the State Department yesterday for about half an hour. Neither of them commented on their talk.

Dulles told The Washington Post later that he had also discussed the arms program with Vandenberg, Vorgs, and others, and said:

"We're not engaged in drawing up any alternate bill. Our hope is that the Administration bill will be rewritten—but that should be done in committee."

Asked what form of action he favored, he said, "an interim bill, for Greece and Turkey, and for the more urgent phases of the European situation. Just how they would be split up would require technical study."

Vorys Favors Prompt Aid

Representative Vorys said:

"I'm for prompt military aid—but I don't see how we can go all the way ahead before there is an organization set up under the North Atlantic Treaty.

"We should put through quickly a small program to show we mean business," he said, "for certain items of an emergency nature," and possibly consider a full program in the fall.

But he said he was opposed to extensive aid on a "country-by-country basis. I would want to show we mean business on cooperation and mutual aid."

He said he was disappointed that the European nations have failed "to carry out what they said they would do two years ago when we voted the Marshall Plan—make currency reforms, reduce trade barriers, and the like."

Vorys said he suggested the arms program get started in the House last January, "and I'm not going to be rushed off my feet by them coming in here the last week in July."

Asks Statement on China

He also said there should first be a "policy statement on China."

Asked for comment on news reports that secret intelligence reports on Soviet armament will be presented in closed session, State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said:

"We have information about Russia's armament. . . . Such information as we have will be made available."

$74,000,000 Voted to ECA

gue, Senator Homer Ferguson, who proposed the ECA cut in committee, backed up McKellar's argument that to restore the last quarter sum would set a Senate precedent "which will return to plague us."

But two Democratic members of the committee, Senators Carl Hayden (Ariz.) and A. Willis Robertson (Va.) hopped into the debate on Vandenberg's side.

"In that kind of program, you can't tread water," said Robertson. "You've got to go ahead."

Lucas Cites Joint Resolution

Senator Lucas also got into the argument. Lucas contended that a joint resolution passed a month ago designed to tide fund-shy agencies over the month of July gave Hoffman all the authority he needed to use the full last quarter fund. McKellar and Ferguson clashed with Lucas. They said the stop-gap resolution applied only to 1950 appropriations.

The vote like the debate crossed party lines to give Hoffman a limited victory—the only money battle he is likely to win in the Senate.

Twelve Republicans joined 29 Democrats to beat the last quarter cut. Fifteen Democrats and 22 Republicans voted for it. Maryland's two Senate votes were not recorded. Virginia's two Senators split, Byrd voting for the cut and Robertson against it.

Today the ECA floor fight will turn on the restrictive amendments tied to the bill by the committee. Vandenberg has called all of them "crippling."

Effects of Amendments

They would (1) freeze about two billion dollars of ECA and Army funds for purchase of surplus farm commodities; (2) earmark 50 million dollars for a loan to Spain; (3) require Hoffman to review scheduled dismantling of German chemical plants, and (4) deny ECA funds to nations which fail to live up to treaties with this country.

Instead of the $4,198,200,000 he asked for 1950, the Senate will allot Hoffman $3,778,380,000 for 12 months. The House voted him $3,568,470,000 for 10½ months.

Before the ECA money tussle, Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) reported to the Senate on a three-week tour of Europe and accused Britain of blocking currency exchange to promote Western Europe trade.

He predicted the Marshall plan would fail unless European countries get together on their currencie. Continental Europe, he said, would have no trouble getting together "but the country stopping it all is Great Britain."

Baruch Says: 'Europe Must Help Itself'

By Peter Kihss

New York, July 26 (NYHT).—Back from a quick look at Europe, his first in four years, Bernard M. Baruch said here today that "Europe has got to help itself more."

Baruch

"I think the Marshall plan has done a lot of good," the 78-year-old elder statesman reported. If they would get together in a defense and economic union to help themselves, I think they would not have such a gloomy view."

Specifically, Baruch went on, the Europeans should set about "a realistic readjustment of currencies" and open up markets among themselves to improve trade. Britain, he said has got to get rid of its overhanging (14 billion-dollar) blocked sterling debt. He said thsi should have been canceled as "a contribution to the common cause."

Baruch complimented Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder on Snyder's recent European conferences. Snyder, he said, had "created a very favorable impression," and hadn't made any promises, he thought—"like Br'er Rabbit, he just lay low."

Of the British, Baruch said: "They're spending so much of the time nationalizing and socializing that they haven't devoted too much time to using their energies and developing their country and production."

A reporter asked: "Do you think Europe would help itself more if we helped it less?"

"I do not agree with those people who claim we have a slump in America and we will look more to the left than to the right," he said. No nation has voluntarily adopted Communism. It is far removed from the thoughts of Americans. If we lose some money and have a slump, we can tighten our belt adn overcome it. We've had slumps before. I don't myself look for a slump."

West Europe's Ocean Trade Deficit Mounts

Geneva, July 26 (AP).—Europe's balance of payments with North America fell off sharply during the first quarter of this year, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe reported today.

In its first-quarter survey of Europe's economy, the commission said the economic recession in the United States "had no marked effect on the domestic economic situation of European countries."

Industrial production in Europe continued to rise at the same "exceptionally high rate" as during 1948, but there was also an increase in unemployment, reflecting "the continued relaxation of inflationary pressure."

European exports to the United States and Canada, which had been increasing steadily during 1948, declined by some 12 per cent during the first quarter of 1949, the report said.

At the same time, European imports from North America increased by some 10 per cent.

As a result, the quarterly deficit of the 10 major west-European exporting countries in their trade with the United States and Canada rose from 794 million dollars in the fourth quarter of 1948 to 949 million dollars in the first quarter of 1949.

"Available trade returns for April and May," the survey declared, "although too incomplete for conclusive analysis, indicate that in the second quarter of this year these difficulties were intensified."

The total index of industrial production rose from 19 to 21 per cent above the 1947 level. Sharp declines in the production index were recorded by Greece, Ireland and Italy, but were offset by the over all increase in most European countries.

Proposal for Atlantic Union Launched in Senate, House

Smathers (D., Fla.), and Wadsworth (R., N. Y.).

Almost simultaneously, another group of 19 Senators introduced a resolution calling for the strengthening of the United Nations and its development into "a world federation open to all nations with defined and limited powers adequate to preserve peace and prevent aggression . . ."

Identical with a resolution introduced in the House on June 7, which now has 103 House sponsors, the "world federation" resolution was introduced in the Senate by Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), for himself and 13 colleagues.

Later Tobey and Senators Graham (D., N. C.), and Pepper (D., Fla.), jointly held a press conference on the world federation move. Said Tobey, "I think it is most important to emphasize that this is open to all nations . . . Any piecemeal or partial federation would tend to aggravate the hazardous division that exists in the world today."

Tobey denied, however, that he was hitting at the Atlantic union move. Graham and Pepper agreed that both resolutions, and a third recently introdced by Senator Sparkman for another group, moved "in the same general direction." They said Foreign Relations Committee hearings might possibly be arranged on all three.

Besides Tobey, these other Senators cosponsored the world federation resolution: Pepper (D., Fla.), Graham (D., N. C.), Manguson (D., Wash.), Murray (D., Mont.), Downey (D., Calif.), Hendrickson (R., N. J.), Johnson (D., Colo.), Humphrey (D., Minn.), Douglas (D., Ill.) Hill (D., Ala.), Sparkman (D., Ala.), McMahon (D., Conn.), Withers (D., Ky.), Thye (R., Minn.), Long (D., La.), Johnston (D., S. C.), Morse (R., Oreg.), Hunt (D., Wyo.).

In introducing the Atlantic union resolution, Kefauver told the Senate:

"So great has been the success of the federal system wherever it has been tried that for us to decide even to explore its possibilities in the Atlantic community would rouse great hope. It would seem wise to begin this exploration now, while we have time to do it carefully, rather than risk waiting until events force hasty, ill-considered action."

Action Soon Unlikely

Kefauver and Roberts told a subsequent press conference that although they were hopeful of action this session, they thought both Foreign Relations committees would be tied up on the pending arms-to-Europe program.

Senator George, representing the group on the Foreign Relations Committee, did not sit in on the press conference. But he told reporters he will press for hearings when Congress convenes in January.

Roberts stressed that the proposal is "purely exploratory," and in no way in conflict with the United Nations charter.

"If free nations want to work together, there is nothing in the Charter that prevents them coalescing," he said. "Instead, such a union would reduce United Nations difficulties and strengthen the Charter."

Wadsworth, Boggs, Judd, Hill, Baldwin, Maybank, Chapman, Thye and Gillette made brief statements indorsing the proposal.

Gillette said he had taken the opposite side of the question in a radio debate with Roberts and Streit, but had swung over to the Atlantic union principle after the Senate ratified the Atlantic Pact.

Wadsworth and Judd said steps already taken, from the Marshall Plan to the Atlantic Pact, were wise but emergency expedients. They said Atlantic union aimed at a permanent solution, and logically should follow the emergency measures.

Baldwin called it "a step toward extending the area of democracy," and Hill said some such action is needed "to furnish lasting assurance of peace." Chapman said the proposal no more binds participating governments to accept the recommendations of the convention than did our Constitutional Convention bind the States.

Sponsors of the rival "world federation" resolution advanced similar arguments for their own plan.

Senator Graham said ratification of the pact "gains time for the educational preparation of governments and peoples, looking toward amendments . . . for the development of the United Nations into a federal structure strong enough to maintain peace."

Pepper said that "a United Nations with the power to guarantee and maintain peace under world law is an essential ingredient of any workable answer to communism."

Senator Magnuson said the world federation plan "does not envision a world government with the full powers normally associated with a national government, but to the contrary, contemplates a very limited deposit of sovereignty in the United Nations."

stated their minimum needs, and since even these minimums have been sliced, first in the Economic Cooperation Administration and later by Congress, the gravity of this new situation can hardly be overstated.

The British request was made with the bluntness characteristic of bad news. It did not actually ask for additional funds. It asserted simply that unless such funds are forthcoming, Britain may well lose its battle for economic survival. No European statesman has to be reminded of the effect this would have on all Europe's economy.

The program section of the OEEC in Paris has as yet taken no action on the British message, although it has been the subject of close study since it arrived Saturday. The council of the OEEC will meet on it Thursday.

Even before the new British request, OEEC was faced with an almost impossible task: It was necessary to squeeze a $4,566,000,000 budget as requested originally, into a $3,700,000,000 income.

The enormity of the British demand makes it unlikely that it is a mere tactic.

President Sees Foreign Journalists

Twenty-one German and Austrian journalists had a few words from the President yesterday during a White House visit.

"There are a great many wonderful newspapers in this country, and I hope that you can get some good out of them; and I am sure you will," the President told them.

"When you go back to Germany, I hope you will be able to say that you have been cordially treated in this country, and that we at least showed that we were glad to have you pay us a visit."

Shortly afterwards, the party adjourned to Calvert House, 1401 16th st. nw., where members are guests.

The journalists will be guests of Washington newspapermen at a dinner tonight at the Statler Hotel.

The party, including Dr. Annemarie Langens, editor of the Berlin Telegraf, and Miss Inge Santner, women's editor of the Vienna Courier, arrived in New York in mid-June. They attended the American Press Institute at Columbia University, and then in pairs visited eastern seaboard and Midwestern newspapers.

The members of the party praised the operation of the American free press.

A second party of Western Zone visitors—eight German broadcasters—arrived in Washington yesterday to [illegible] are:

Eiter Fuss and Walter Kroeplin, all of Munich; Mrs. Charlotte Kaminsky, Miss Klara Schimmel, Jochem Leschke and Oscar Hirschfeld, all of Stuttgart.

AEC Doctor Declares Hazard Of A-Bomb Ray Exaggerated

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—An Atomic Energy Commission doctor said today that atom bomb radiation is "perhaps the most overevaluated" hazard of war.

This opinion was expressed by Col. James P. Cooney, a member of the AEC's medical advisory staff. Writing in the July issue of Radiology, a journal for specialists in X-ray and radium, he said:

"The residual radiation from an air burst bomb is insignificant. The significant radiation occurs in a matter of micro-seconds and does not extend beyond a 2000-yard radius.

"Immediately after a detonation such as occurred at Hiroshima or Nagasaki, it is perfectly safe to enter into a bombed area and rescue the thousands whose injuries will be such that they will not be able to walk."

An editorial in radiology, accompanying Colonel Cooney's article, urged a reassessment of present official estimates on danger doses of radiation. It pointed out that the National Committee on Radiation Safety has fixed a "permissible daily dose" of radiation at 0.1 Roentgen a day and 0.3 Roentgen a week.

Men have survived exposure in single instances of up to 100 full Roentgens, the editorial said.

Police Alerted

Revolution In Ecuador Short-Lived

Quito, Ecuador, July 26 (AP).—A revolt against the government of President Galo Plaza Lasso flared and died in a matter of hours here early today.

President Plaza, who has witnessed many a revolution in his day, stood in the doorway of his palace today and watched his police overcome the new revolt.

Commented the President:

"I am witnessing a demonstration of the national sport."

The government listed only two casualties, a policeman and a police chauffeur wounded by the gunfire of a rebel prisoner as the two were driving him to police headquarters.

The policeman later died.

Informed sources said up to 60 persons, most of them retired military men, were under arrest. Government spokesmen said the number was not announced "in order not to delay the investigation."

Swift counter action repulsed an armed attack on the presidential palace. Troops rounded up Col. Carlos Mancheno, former dictator, and a group of aides as they were trying to induce a tank detachment in the southern part of the city to join the uprising.

President Plaza, former ambassador to the United States, who was elected to a four-year term in 1948, said the government will punish the guilty severely.

Government sources said some of Mancheno's men broke into a civil guard station and seized machineguns and 60 rifles. With these arms, the group attacked the palace.

The police had been tipped off, however, and a guard established at the palace. This guard fought off the attack until police reinforcements could rush to the scene. They arrested the band.

Nanking, July 26 (AP).—The Chinese Communist high command has ordered its armies to capture the Nationalist provisional capital of Canton before August 15, it was reported authoritatively today.

A general Red offensive in South China is rolling forward despite widespread floods. Red forces are driving through the rich ricebowl Province of Hunan.

(Nationalist garrison headquarters in Canton meanwhile proclaimed martial law in the refugee capital, effective Wednesday. The proclamation—along with a strict midnight-to-5 a. m. curfew—came as the government military situation in Hunan admittedly was deteriorating.

(Changsha, Hunan capital, still was in the Nationalists' possession, Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa reported from Canton, but strategically it already was lost. Chuchow, 25 miles south on the Canton-Hankow rail line, was reported in Communist hands. The Reds were expected to launch an assault on the big rail junction city of Hengyang, 265 miles north of Canton at any time, Moosa reported.)

Communist leaders are delaying organization of a new national government pending occupation of Canton. A political consultative conference is scheduled to be called shortly after the provisional capital falls.

The United States Government warned approximately 900 Americans living in five South China provinces to flee before the advance of Communist armies from the north.

A notice sent out by the embassy office in Canton was addressed to Americans in Canton (Kwangtung Province) and those in Kwangsi, Fukien, Kiangsi and Hunan Provinces.

Vatican Ban Extended to Red Unions

By Barrett McGurn

Rome, July 26 (NYHT).—The Vatican announced tonight that its decree against Catholic membership in the Communist Party applies equally to Catholic membership in "really Communist labor unions" and in associations "organized directly by communism."

The condemnation applies also to Socialists where the Socialist Party "makes an absolutely common cause with the Communist Party and unites its forces directly with those of communism, favoring the latter in an explicit manner," the Vatican added.

The comment seemed to refer particularly to the left-wing Socialists of Italy, and indicated that right-wing Socialists in Italy and the Labor Party in Britain are exempted.

The Vatican added that the reprimands of certain "abuses of capitalism" are still fully supported by the Catholic church.

The Vatican indicated that Catholics who retain membership "knowingly and willingly" in Communist labor unions or other front organizations will suffer the same as holders of Communist Party cards. Those who still retain their religious faith will be denied the seven sacraments. Those who have embraced the anti-religious doctrines of communism will be excommunicated.

The Vatican statement was published tonight on the front page of its daily newspaper, "L'Osservatore Romano."

The Vatican explanatory statement greatly widened the scope of application of the decree. Its ban on writing for the Communist press covers not only articles on politics, religion and economics but even articles on sports, literary news and theatrical events, the Vatican indicated.

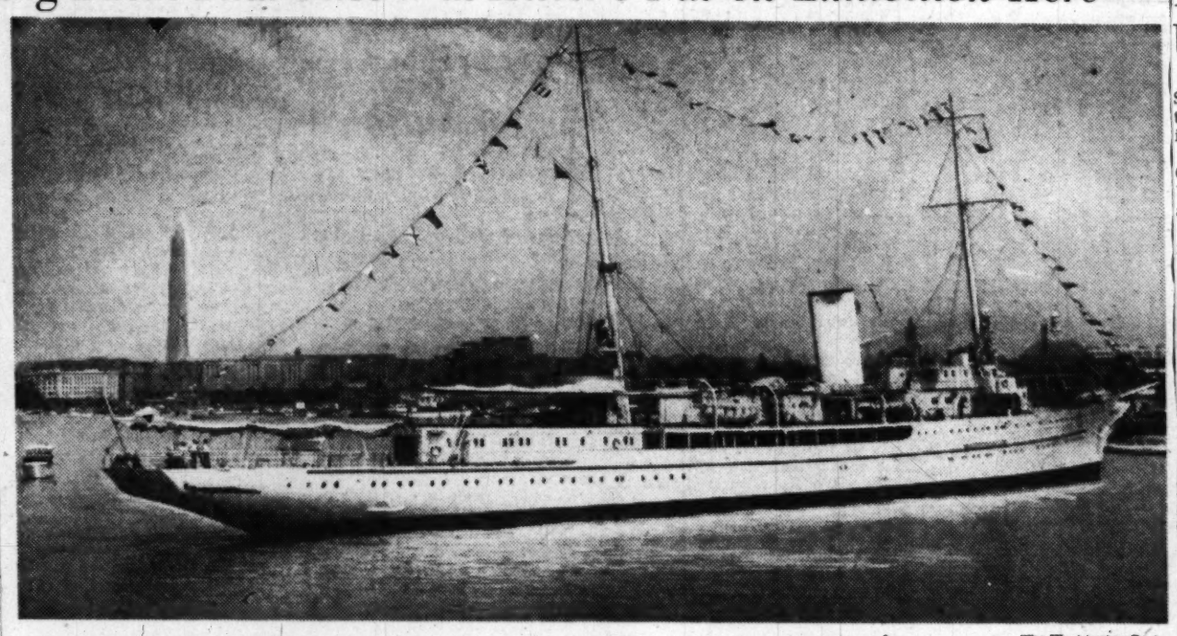
Big Yacht That Once Was Hitler's Put on Exhibition Here



The Washington Post
TIED UP AT MUNICIPAL PIER, THE YACHT THAT BELONGED TO HITLER GOES ON EXHIBITION TODAY

Hitler Yacht Arrives for Public View

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Hitler's mistress Eva Braun slept here, they say, and yesterday you could stand by the bed, look out of the port hole, and see the dome of the Jefferson Memorial.

It was a view Der Fuehrer himself hoped to see one day and possibly—who knows?—from this very position.

Fortunately, when "Hitler's Yacht" tied up at the Municipal Pier yesterday morning it was in the ownership of a British subject.

Hitler's Spartan Quarters

The Grille—which the public can board—is quite a vessel. It is 476 feet over-all, displaces 3800 tons, is painted white. Hitler's quarters have been left exactly as they were, it is said, and in general so have otheer parts of the ship.

Hitler's sleeping space is an 8 by 10 stateroom, altogether as Spartan as a junior deck officer's on an American destroyer. Across the passageway is the guest room, and there, allegedly Eva Braun slept betimes.

"That is believed particularly," it was said, "because the bulkheads here are Eva's favorite color, soft green."

Eva Braun's Single Bed

The bed was about the size of Adolf's—it was, by the way, a single bed also. But, of course, this vessel was used not mainly as Hitler's yacht, but as the flagship of the German fleet.

From the stern of the yacht, reportedly, Admiral Doenitz broadcast the capitulation news to the German people and rang the ship's bell.

Present owner is 52-year-old George Arida, multi-millionaire textile manufacturer.

The yacht bears the name Grille—which is German for "whim" or "grasshopper," and he doesn't know which was intended. George Arida, jr., 23-year-old, Oxford-educated son of the owner said. The Aridas got the craft from the British Admiralty for $1,600,000. There's a crew of 60, including 12 Germans.

Pushbutton Control

The Grille navigates by pushbuttons—no wheel. It is said to do 32 knots, is good for 27,000 horsepower, is divided into 15 watertight compartments, has steam turbo-generators to propel her at sea, and Diesels for generating power in port.

The vessel will be open to the public from 3 until 8:30 p. m. today, probably Thursday, and possibly other days—exact time here has not been decided.

Berth is at Municipal Pier, 550 Maine ave. sw. Admission is 50 cents, plus tax, for adults, 24 cents, plus tax, for children. Proceeds go to the J. Edgar Hoover Foundation, Children's Hospital, Disabled American Veterans and the American Memorial Foundation.

Senators Plan Move to Blast Out DP Measure Unless McCarran Group Acts by Mid-August

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Irked by the delay in displaced persons legislation, a group of Senators, led by Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), is considering a move to try to discharge Senator Pat McCarran's Judiciary Committee if a new bill is not ready by the middle of next month.

The Ives group is relying on promises made by the Democratic leadership a month ago that there would be a vote this session on revisions of the displaced persons bill.

Ives said yesterday, however, that if a bill is not ready for consideration by mid-August, he may seek to have the committee discharged.

Besides a House-passed measure, there are 14 other bills pending in McCarran's subcommittee.

McCarran (D., Nev.) said yesterday that these present "numerous complicated and controversial issues."

Sharply taking issue with President Truman, McCarran yesterday termed the contention that the displaced persons law discriminates against Catholics and Jews, "a despicable charge, wholly at variance with the facts."

The Chief Executive has repeatedly claimed that the present law is discriminatory against Catholics and Jews.

McCarran, himself a Catholic, said the figures show that three fourths of the persons entering the United States so far under the law have been Catholics and Jews.

"Of the 46,175 displaced persons who were admitted into the United States, pursuant to the present law, as of July 15, 1949, 22,552 were of the Catholic faith; 13,000 were of the Jewish faith; 9204 were of the Protestant faith, and 1410 were of other faiths or unknown faiths," McCarran said.

"In our consideration of the over-all problem," he added, "we are aware of a fact which is not generally known, namely, that the United States of America has thus far received or provided for the reception of more refugees and displaced persons than all of the other countries of the world combined."

Mr. Truman made liberalization of the DP law one of his campaign pledges in the last election. The House has already passed a bill designed to eliminate what were termed discriminatory clauses. It would raise the number of refugees eligible to enter the United States to 339,000 over a three-year period instead of the present 205,000 over two years. It was clear, however, that there will be no drive for speed by McCarran's committee to change the law.

At yesterday's hearing, Otto Durholtz, of Paterson, N. J., secretary for Christian Action in Central Europe, pleaded for DP status for some 11 or 12 million persons of what he called German ethnic origin who were forced to return to Germany from Poland and other middle European countries after the war.

Their return to Germany was agreed upon under the terms of the Potsdam agreement on the theory that many of them might have formed Hitler's fifth column.

Under the constitution of the International Refugee Organization they were excluded from classification as displaced persons.

Durholtz said failure to help these persons find homes means a "cruel outlawing" that has placed such Germans "in a class of criminals."

33 Are Killed In Spain Blast

Tarancon, Spain, July 26 (U.P.).—A gigantic explosion wrecked the Tarancon military arsenal today, destroying dozens of nearby buildings and trapping screaming residents in the wreckage.

Thirty-three persons were known dead and 105 injured. A score of others could be heard in the debris, screaming for help. Forty of the injured were reported in serious condition.

The blast, centered in the powder arsenal, occurred early this morning, but the cries of the trapped victims still could be heard this afternoon in the wreckage-strewn streets of this town of 7000.

U. S., Britain Stay in Berlin

Berlin, July 26 (AP).—The United States and Britain today announced their firm determination to remain in Berlin.

John J. McCloy, U. S. Military Governor in Germany, said the United States has no intention of abandoning this divided city.

The British military government issued a similar statement.

Both answered an eastern Berlin press line that the Western Allies, in moving some personnel to western Germany, are retreating from the city.

McCloy said he plans to maintain headquarters both in Berlin and in Frankfurt. About 200 of the 375 American military government personnel in Berlin will be moved to Frankfurt.

Military government officials disclosed later that McCloy will fly to Washington next Tuesday for talks with State Department officials.

Meantime, the deputy military governors of the four occupying powers agreed at a brief session here on procedure for consulting together on German problems, as directed by the recent Paris meeting of big four foreign ministers.

Maj. Gen. George P. Mays, the U. S. deputy, said the session was "very cordial."

SPEAKING OF Furniture

A ROOM FOR HIM

Do you have a budding young writer or artist in the family? Why not make over that extra room or den just for him? Of course Dad will find it a perfect hideout to catch up on his reading, and Mom is bound to find two or three extra uses for it . . . but it will still be "his" or "her" room and the decorating of it can be fun.

In a room of this type you can throw most of the rules out the window . . . except, of course, color and scale (for perfect harmony these rules are "fixed" . . . but more of that in a later column). Here's the room where you can make the most of those old pieces of furniture you thought too good to discard but not good enough to use in other rooms. Fix them up with paint or slip covers.

Look what's happened to the old Morris chair and upright piano in the illustration above. It didn't take long to convert the piano into a bookcase and slip cover did the trick for "Morris."

You'll find many odd and suitable pieces in our store to round out the picture . . . and perhaps our suggestions will be of help.

With a little time and thought you can make that "extra" room something to be proud of. Our job is to help you in any way we can.

Direct Service Chief Appeal Agreed Upon

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Senate-House conferees yesterday agreed to a unification bill proviso authorizing the civilian and uniformed chiefs of the Army, Navy and Air Force to make independent recommendations to Congress.

Members said the joint conference committee also decided to require that Defense Secretary Louis Johnson report to the Senate and House Armed Services Committees before issuing any transfer or consolidation order "substantially" affecting the statutory functions of the military forces.

Johnson would also be required to make formal reports to Congress twice instead of once a year under a provision adopted by the conferees.

The 14-man joint committee met for more than two hours yesterday on the unification bill. Afterwards, Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), head of the Senate contingent, announced that they had gone through about 30 per cent of the bill. They'll meet again this morning in an effort to reach a final agreement on all phases of the measure.

As forecast last week in The Washington Post, the group decided to consider a pigeonholed House Armed Services Committee version of the unification measure along with S.-1843—the Senate-approved Tydings bill—in writing a final draft of legislation. Actually, the only legislation approved by the House is a watered-down edition, containing only some noncontroversial fiscal reforms for the armed forces.

The House committee version and the Tydings bill are substantially in agreement on the main provisions of the Administration's unification plan.

Some of the details of the House plan, however, are opposed by Secretary Johnson. Among them are the sections requiring that he report to the congressional committees before making any major move and specifically reserving to the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff the right to "come to Congress" when in disagreement with views held by the Secretary of Defense.

In accepting the general concept of these two provisions—with some language changes—the conferees agreed that the Defense chief should "report" to rather than "consult" with the congressional committees. This is interpreted to mean that Johnson would notify the groups in advance of any important action. Their consent would not be required.

On the other hand, the House conferees gave way on one important proviso. They agreed to drop a section nullifying the recent Government reorganization insofar as the armed forces are concerned.

Another point of difference—dealing with transfers of officers from one service to another—was dropped entirely. The Senate bill would permit voluntary transfers with the consent of the Secretaries of the two departments affected—the one the officer is in and the one he proposes to transfer to. The House version flatly barred any such transfers.

In dropping the point, the conferees agreed the question should be considered by separate legislation. As present law does not authorize transfers, the effect of the action is to bar them until pending bills on the subject are considered.

Another section dealing with membership of the National Security Council also was rewritten. It will permit the President to appoint other Cabinet members or Undersecretaries to the top-level diplomatic-defense advisory group, but they must be confirmed a second time by the Senate.

All of the decisions made yesterday are tentative to the extent that they are subject to reconsideration before the conference committee reports back to the Senate and House.

Two Generals Get New Posts

Two top-ranking Army generals were given new assignments yesterday.

Lieut. Gen. Raymond S. McLain, Chief of Army Information, will succeed Map. Gen. Edmond H. Leavey as Army Comptroller. Leavey is retiring.

Parks

Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, now deputy Army commander in the Pacific, will return to a post he held here for two years after the war—chief of the Army's Public Information Division.

Parks will succeed the late Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Prichard, who was killed here in a motorboat explosion July 10. He will also take over McLain's duties. Both information jobs are of lesser importance since the creation of a unified information office for the armed forces.

In Commandos, Too

Canadian Major Now Marine Buck

The Washington Post
ROBERT BISHOP
. . . under his third flag

A small wiry soldier who fought more than six years with the famed British commandos during the war and served later as a major with the Canadian army last night joined forces with the United States Marines—as a buck private.

Robert Bishop, a sandy-haired 29-year-old civil engineer, who modestly calls himself an "infantryman," was cut down on the beaches of Salerno, served as part of a private bodyguard for Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia and raided enemy positions from Africa to Norway.

Turning down a commission in the United States Army he threw in his lot last night with the Fifth Infantry Battalion of the Marines, a reserve outfit. Nearly 60 per cent of this battalion commanded by Maj. David F. Condon, jr., are veterans of Pacific assaults.

Says Bishop, "I figured I'd be at home with this outfit. I can teach them a few things about the work of assault troops on the continent and can learn the methods they used in the Pacific."

Bishop, who works as an engineer for Southern Railway, lives with his family at 4317 Kansas ave. nw. He was born in Baltimore but moved to England with his family when he was 3 years old.

After getting a degree in engineering from Birmingham University in England, he joined the Territorial Army (comparable to our National Guard) and was mobilized at the outset of war in September 1939.

After commando training, where he made 67 parachute jumps and swam a mile with full fighting equipment, he was assigned to the Second Commando Battalion.

From that time until the end of the war, life, Bishop said, was a succession of raids and beachheads.

Speed Urged On Stockpiling Scarce Goods

The Munitions Board told Congress yesterday that completion of the Nation's reserve of scarce materials "should not be delayed."

It made the recommendation in a semiannual report on the national stockpile as the Senate prepared to vote on a plan to rescind one-third of the 835 million dollars previously appropriated this year for stockpiling.

The report also contained what some interpreted as a slap at Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.). Thomas, leader of the fight to make even more drastic slashes in the stockpiling program, made public confidential data regarding the size of the war reserve of strategic materials desired by top defense officials and existing shortages.

The letter of transmittal from the Munitions Board, accompanying the report, contained the following statement by Lieut. Gen. LeRoy Lutes, director of the board's staff:

"Attention is respectfully invited to the fact that the statistical supplement is confidential and that appropriate measures should be taken to observe this classification."

It was data from the confidential supplement of such a report that Thomas released to reporters.

In calling for early completion of the war reserve of copper, lead, zinc, rubber and other key materials not available in sufficient quantities in the United States, the Munitions Board said:

"In some future period of worsening international relations, accelerated stockpiling might not be possible even with unlimited appropriations.

"Procurement of any items is limited by production capacities. Industrial requirements in advance of the opening of actual hostilities might require release of materials from the stockpile instead of permitting additions to it. Thus, it is vital that the stockpile be completed before that time."

It also noted that progress in building up the stockpile is difficult in times when industry is at peak production and there are no surplus materials—as, say, during the past two years. Every effort, therefore, should be made in times like these to buy the scarce materials when they are available, it was stated.

The report stated that as of June 30 materials worth two-fifths of the stockpile goal already had been purchased or transferred from war surpluses or ECA operations. If the full 1950 appropriations can be spent, the program will reach nearly two-thirds of its objectives, the board declared. Under an amendment to the pending defense bill, approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee, 275 million of this fund would have to be turned back into the Treasury.

The board estimated that, because of falling prices, the cost of the complete stockpile will total $3,217,000,000, as compared with an original estimate of $3,700,000,000.

Col. Hunt Ill

5 Per Cent Investigation Faces Delay

Illness of the key figure in the Senate "five percenter" investigation may delay the opening of public hearings in the probe.

Chairman Hoey (D., N. C.) of the Senate investigating subcommittee said that James V. Hunt, former Army colonel and self-styled "management counselor" is ill and may not be able to testify next week. Open hearings have been tentatively scheduled for the first week of August.

"We have been in contact with Mr. Hunt's doctor and he tells us he is ill and unable to appear," Hoey stated.

The Senator said a definite decision as to hearings will not be made until after the subcommittee's staff is ready to go ahead, probably later this week. Then Hunt's physician will be contacted again as to Hunt's ability to take the stand, and a decision will be reached.

Hoey made it plain the committee's probe will be lacking in the fanfare of some prior Capitol Hill investigations. He said there will be no newsreels, or television broadcasts and if possible the committee's own hearing room will be used. The huge Senate caucus room was the scene of some of the prior probes.

Meanwhile, another member of the committee, Senator Mundt (R., S. D.), said the "percenter" investigation thus far has turned up documents of more value than Hunt's much-publicied but still secret diary.

Mundt said the former colonel's voluminous account of his Government contacts has been valuable chiefly in furnishing leads for committee investigators. It will figure less during the hearings than other documentary evidence on hand, the Senator predicted.

Blast Is Fired At Baldwin on Probe Conduct

By The Associated Press

A bitter row sidetracked all other business in the Senate yesterday when Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) accused Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) of acting "criminally wrong" in a congressional investigation.

Balwin is chairman of a Senate Armed Services subcommittee that has long been investigating the conduct of United States Army officers in the Malmedy massacre trials.

Maj. Dwight Fanton, Baldwin's law partner, was the Army officer in charge of a war crime team that collected evidence against German S.S. troops suspected of complicity in the Malmedy case.

Angry words flew on the Senate floor as McCarthy concluded a three-hour speech in which he bluntly denounced Baldwin for doing "a very shameful thing" and accused Baldwin's subcommittee of attempting to "whitewash" the Army.

"Mock Trials" Admitted

Witnesses at the Senate inquiry hearings, including Major Fanton, acknowledged that weird "mock trials" were staged to wring confessions from German soldiers alleged to be involved in the massacre of American GIs.

Fanton denied other testimony, however, that Gestapo-style brutality was used in obtaining statements from Nazi prisoners.

Turning on Baldwin at the end of his speech yesterday, McCarthy declared:

"The day will come when the Senator (Baldwin) will regret doing a very shameful thing—to sit as chairman of a subcommittee hearing evidence against his own law partner. You are incompetent in the eyes of the world to sit on the committee. You should have removed yourself.

"It was criminally wrong."

Several Senators flew to Baldwin's defense.

Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) shouted that McCarthy had violated a Senate rule in saying Baldwin had acted "criminally" and demanded that the language be stricken from the record.

McCarthy agreed he had violated the rule. He said he would be glad to have the words stricken.

Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.) who acted as temporary chairman of the subcommittee when Baldwin stepped down on several occasions, told the Senate that Baldwin had been "most fair throughout the hearings," even leaving the chair when his law partner, Fanton, testified

Baldwin himself angrily denied there is any attempt to whitewash either the Army or Major Fanton.

"My personal interest in this thing," Baldwin told McCarthy, "amounts to nothing."

Unit Votes Ban an 'Special Order' Sales by PX

By The Associated Press

A House Armed Services Subcommittee yesterday voted to ban "special order" sales by military stores whereby servicemen buy anything from furs to refrigerators at cut-rate prices.

Chairman Philip J. Philbin (D., Mass.) said that if the Army, Navy and Air Force don't comply voluntarily, his group will draft compulsory legislation.

"Special order" sales cover almost anything a customer may want. In the Army and Air Force, the only limit is a $300 sale price. In the Navy there is no limit. Goods ordered on this basis are delivered at near-wholesale prices without payment of Federal excise taxes.

The subcommittee found that military men were ordering things like refrigerators, furs and television sets at prices far below those outside businessmen could sell them for.

Earlier the subcommittee got an agreement from the three services to stop selling expensive watches, jewelry and other high-priced merchandise.

Union Chief Quits In T-H Oath Protest

Philadelphia, July 26 (AP).—Donald Henderson, president of the CIO Food, Tobasso, Agricultural and Allied Workers Union since its 1937 founding, resigned today "as a protest against the Taft-Hartley law and against the signing of the unconstitutional non-Communist affidavit."

Henderson's resignation was unamimously accepted by the union's international executive board.

John Tisa, FTA director of organization, was named acting president.

Henderson said that prior to his resignation he urged the board to "comply with the legal requirements" of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The union board agreed, stating "our sole purpose in complying is to defend our union in certain situations."

The board appointed Henderson national administrative director of FTA. It said the appointment "will assure our members of his continued services as leader of a fighting, progressive union."

Six More Cleveland Postal Clerks Suspended

Cleveland, July 26 (AP).—Six Cleveland postal clerks reported today that they have been suspended for alleged communistic sympathies.

The action raised to eight the number of postal workers here who have been suspended under President Truman's loyalty program.

Bertam A. Washington, president of the Cleveland branch of the National Alliance of Postal Employes, said the action would be appealed.

The alliance is chiefly a Negro group and Washington said four of the six are Negroes. One is Jewish.

"Judging from the records of these employes now suspended, the action confirms our original conviction that the investigation was the product of the Government's policy of anti-Semitism and anti-Negroism in the Post Office Department," Washington added.

Survey Set On D. C. Land

The Commissioners yesterday named a committee to find out exactly how big a landowner the District is today.

The committee, brain child of District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, will determine "just as promptly as possible" the history of acquisition and the present use of all land here in which the District "can claim the slightest interest."

Fowler explained that "indifferent record keeping" by the various city and Federal agencies makes it presently impossible to learn the actual ownership and use of public land which District funds have purchased or helped to buy.

The possibility of enactment of home rule and the District becoming a separate municipality was cited by Fowler as one of the underlying purposes of the land survey.

"If we get home rule," said Fowler, "the people forming the city council should know in the first instance what the city owns and what it does not."

He also pointed to the vast acres of land purchased by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission with District funds, but titled to the Federal Government, as another matter which "should be pinned down."

He said it was essential that the people, Congress and city planning agencies should have the information available in up-to-date form.

The Commissioner named Fowler chairman of the land survey committee which will include the District Surveyor, Assessor, and John Nolen, jr., planning director of NCPPC.

Arnold Urges Trust Laws for Unions

Thurman Arnold, former New Deal trustbuster, yesterday urged Congress to bring labor unions under the Federal antitrust laws.

"It is a very dangerous thing," he said, "to permit unions to monopolize the labor supply without any curbs whatsoever."

Arnold testified as a witness before the Senate Banking Committee, which is investigating the coal industry and the tactics of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers union.

Arnold, chief of the Justice Department's antitrust division during the late President Roosevelt's regime and now in private law practice in Washington, told the Senate committee that the three-day week was initiated to create a coal scarcity and thus place the miners' union in a favorable position for "the next strike."

Without a change in the present antitrust laws, Arnold said, it would be easy for unions and management to get together and do "the very things which the antitrust laws forbid."

He noted that the Supreme Court, in several cases, has virtually exempted unions from the antitrust laws.

Therefore, he said, it would be a simple matter to fix prices and restrict production — without violating antitrust laws—by having the union "initiate" such a move and then the employers "give in."

One morning last week I was out in the yard, tending my garden, when the telephone began to ring. I dropped my tools and hurried toward the house. But I only got as far as the front door when the ringing stopped.

I had no way of knowing who had called. In fact, I'm still wondering who it might have been. I do wish folks would give a body a minute to answer the telephone. Ten rings are usually enough, for most folks answer their telephones as promptly as they can.

Two Governors Call Joblessness Acute

Boston, July 26 (AP).—Two New England Governors warned today that unemployment in their States is critical, despite Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer's assurance that the region's economy is "fundamentally sound."

Govs' Paul A. Dever of Massachusetts and Chester Bowles of Connecticut told Sawyer that one out of every eight workers in their States is out of a job.

Dever tagged the situation "most critical," predicted there might be another 92,000 jobless in his State by September 30, and asked for 36 million dollars in Federal aid.

Bowles said unless the wages slump in Connecticut is checked it "must eventually have a very serious and paralyzing effect on purchasing power and retail sales, not only regionally but nationally."

Secretary Sawyer is starting a survey of the Nation's business conditions as a forerunner of Federal aid to hard-hit areas.

"I've learned that these things are never as bad as they seem," he commented. He declined to say what Federal action, if any, he favored—several possibilities will be studied. Although joblessness in a few cities is "serious," he declared, he would name but two of them—Lawrence, Mass., and Providence, R. I.

Earlier Governor Dever had told him that:

There are 258,000 unemployed in Massachusetts—"in only four States is the situation worse when computed on the ratio of insured unemployment."

Textile centers are hardest hit, followed by durable goods. There are nearly five times as many jobless in the textile cities of New Bedford and Lawrence as there were a year ago.

Dever asked for 36 million dollars in Federal aid for highways, relocation of Boston's market district, and improvement of the Logan Airport. He also recommended creation of a Valley Authority to develop New England rivers as a source of cheap hydro-electric power.

Governor Bowles, who was not present at the meeting with Sawyer, said in a message there were 106,000 out of work in Connecticut, not including 24,000 who have exhausted their unemployment benefits and 70,000 who are on short time.

Labor Trouble Shuts Douglas Shoe Plant

Brockton, Mass., July 26 (U.P.). The W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., one of the Nation's oldest shoe manufacturing firms, announced today it will close its Brockton plant permanently because of labor trouble.

The Independent Brotherhood of Shoe & Allied Craftsmen, which represents 600 workers at the factory, had been asked to accept a wage cut and a cut in the number of workers. The union asked arbitration.

Marshall H. Stevens, executive vice president, said the company will seek to reestablish its plant "outside of Brockton."

The Douglas Company was founded in 1876, and at one time employed some 2500 persons here. The firm also has a plant at Scranton, Pa.

Worsted Cut Not Much Help

The price reduction in men's wear worsted fabrics, announced Monday by American Woolen Co., will have only a small effect upon the price of suits, local retailers said yesterday.

Other costs that enter into making men's clothing, particularly labor, have increased rather than gone down, they said. These costs are greater than the cost of materials.

The greatest reduction by American Woolen was in "piece-dyed" suitings, it was pointed out. These are solid colors, which are not the most popular type. Reduction in these amounted to 70 cents a yard, or about 19 per cent. But in other, more popular lines, the reduction averaged about 22½ cents a yard, which would bring a cut of $1 to $2 at the most in the cost of a suit.

The American Woolen's cut was not influenced by the market price of wool, Agriculture Department Wool experts pointed out.

In fact wool prices are now above recent years. This month the average farm price of wool is 49.4 cents a pound. A year ago it was 48.8 and in 1947, 42 cents. It reached a high in April of 51.5 cents, dropping in May to 50.6. The Government support price is 42.3 cents.

Women's Wear Worsteds For Spring Reduced

New York, July 26 (AP).—American Woolen Co. today announced price reductions ranging from 8 to 18 per cent on its spring 1950 lines of womenswear worsteds for the dress, suit and coat trade.

The extent to which the cut in fabric prices may be carried through to the finished suits, coats and dresses at the retail level was not clear.

Some mill sources said the cuts could mean a reduction of a few dollars at the retail level.

Senate Unit Gets Farm Legislation Today

New farm legislation, including amendments to both the Agricultural Act of 1938 and the act of 1948, will be presented to the Senate Agriculture Committee today.

The proposed changes will come from a subcommittee headed by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Agriculture Secretary. Anderson's announcement came after a busy day which saw:

1. Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan angrily refuse to compromise on his proposal for a "trial run" of his farm plan, in spite of its recent overwhelming defeat in the House.

2. Prediction by Anderson and Committee Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) that the recently-passed House farm bill will not be reported to the Senate by the Agriculture Committee.

The House bill would postpone the Aiken portion of the present farm law, which will become effective January 1 unless Congress takes action before that date.

The Aiken portion would provide for a sliding scale of farm price supports, ranging from 60 to 90 per cent of parity.

The present law, known as the Hope section, provides for mandatory price supports at 90 per cent of parity for basic commodities. The House voted to continue this portion next year.

One report was that Anderson's proposal today will be to change the sliding scale of the Aiken law to 75 to 90 per cent of parity. Aiken is believed to have sufficient strength to defeat passage of the House bill by the Senate.

The House measure, however, may find support in other sources. Chairman Thomas indicated he might favor it. "I'm running for election next year," he told reporters, "and as far as I'm concerned I favor a farm program of at least 90 per cent of parity."

Tennessee Farmer

Hutchinson Appointed as Brannan Aide

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday nominated a Tennessee farmer, Knox T. Hutchinson of Murfreesboro, to the long-vacant post of

Hutchinson

Meyer

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

Simultaneously the Department of Agriculture announced that E. A. Meyer, administrator of the Research and Marketing Act of 1947, had resigned. Shortly afterward, it announced that Meyer's duties have been assigned to the Assistant Secretary.

Department spokesmen denied any relationship between Hutchinson's appointment and Meyer's resignation. They asserted that Meyer has been trying to quit since the war, but had stayed on at the request of former Secretary Clinton P. Anderson and Secretary Charles F. Brannan.

The post of Assistant Secretary has been vacant since Brannan was named Secretary more than a year ago. The White House twice named Elmer H. Wene of Vineland, N. J., candidate for Governor of New Jersey, to the post. Wene, a protege of former boss Frank Hague of Jersey City, first turned down the post, and on the second appointment, just before election, failed to reply. After President Truman's reelection, Wene said he would "consider appointment as Secretary."

The new Assistant Secretary operates a 500-acre farm near Murfreesboro. He formerly taught agriculture at Teachers College at Murfreesboro.

He was educated at Teachers College and Peabody College, with graduate work at Vanderbilt, the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Tennessee. He majored in agriculture, agricultural economics, public finance and administration, and scientific research.

He served in the Navy in World War I.

Where Farm and Factory Work Hand in Hand

This self-sufficient Isle of Progress maintains its people's prosperity by skillful coordination of Agriculture, Industry and Government

IN THE PAST 18 years the Dominican Republic has developed its rich natural resources to produce an average favorable trade balance of $35,000,000 per year. The key to this achievement lies in the efficient cooperation of farm, industry and government.

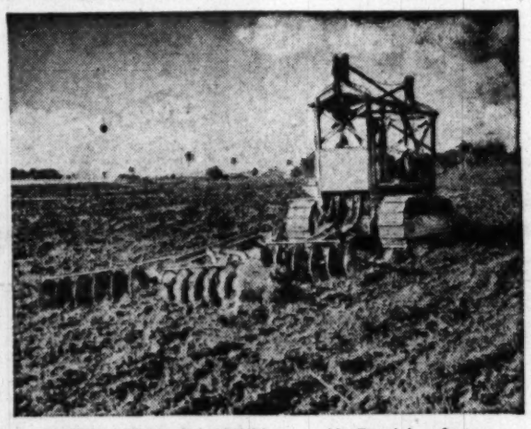
In 1930 only 7500 acres were cultivated by irrigation. Today 73 canal projects irrigate more than 100,000 acres. These facilities, plus Dominican enterprise, now bring forth vast crops of sugar, cacao, coffee, tobacco, bananas, peanuts, rice, corn and other vegetables and fruits.

The country's industries, which have grown with the farm development, process much of the country's farm production of food, not only for home consumption but also for export in major volume.

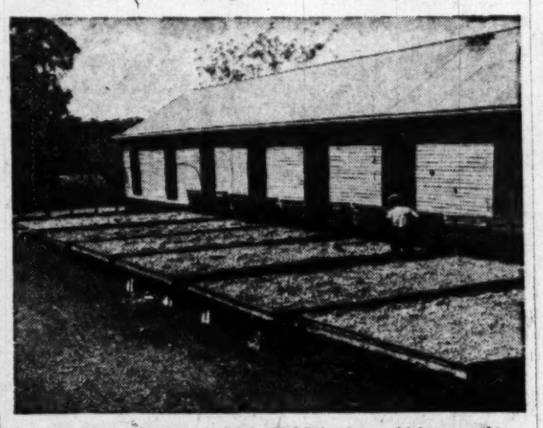
Efficient farming is encouraged by the government of the Dominican Republic. In many agricultural colonies a farmer who cultivates an area for 8 years receives free ownership of the land. Meantime he enjoys government aid in the form of plows, tractors, seeds, plants, work animals and marketing aid.

This amazing agricultural development, geared to progressive Dominican industry, has made this nation become known as the Isle of Progress.

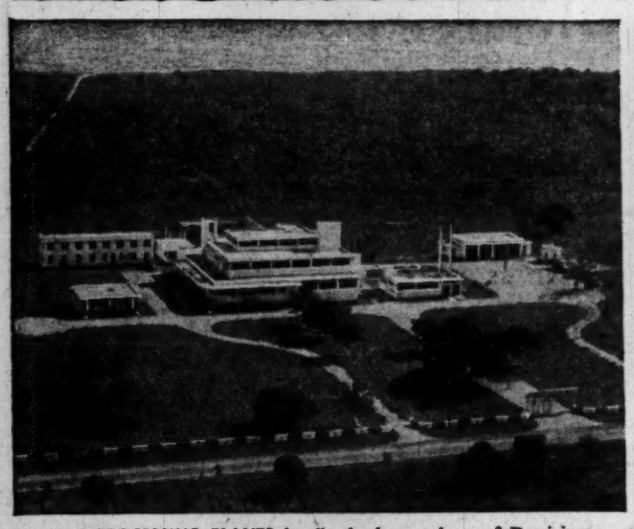
For information concerning tourist attractions and business opportunities, write to the Dominican Republic Information Center, 6 West 51st Street, New York 20, N. Y.



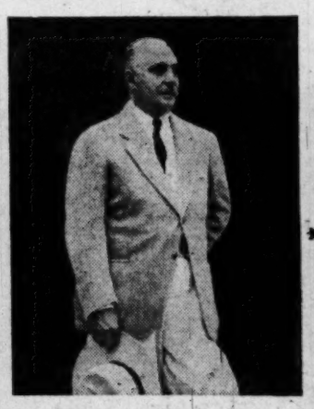
MODERN FARM MACHINES are used by Dominican farmers. Other modern farming developments include scientific drainage, irrigation, better roads, mosquito-control and good school, medical and credit facilities. Agriculture is the leading industry.



THE 6th LARGEST CACAO CROP in the world is grown in the Dominican Republic. And Dominicans process 65,000 pounds of cacao beans into chocolate each day. Much of this is exported to the United States for use in American confectionery products.



MEAT PROCESSING PLANTS handle the large volume of Dominican-grown cattle and other food animals, for local consumption and for export to other Latin American countries. The modern equipment and sanitary control of these plants compares favorably with such plants in the United States.



PRESIDENT TRUJILLO, an enthusiastic agriculturist, maintains his own farm, "Fundacion," and devotes interest and energy to the improvement of the breed of horses and cattle. The Dominican government maintains scientific breeding stations conveniently located for service to farmers.

FARMERS ARE HELPED in many ways by the Dominican Department of Agriculture, which is building this new agricultural institute to cost 1½ million dollars to train young men and women in modern, scientific farm production and marketing.

Dolores

THE experiences that lie in wait for a girl in the Miss Washington contest are exciting, as Dolores, singer with Basil Fomeen's Band in the Carlton's Congo Room, found out last weekend.

She spent it on an outing sponsored by Life Magazine and All American Airlines. The vacations are planned to give an inexpensive vacation to young people of different careers, backgrounds, and religions.

Dolores, as a night club singer, was chosen to represent the entertainment world, and Life thought her bid for Miss Washington would be a good reason for a cover shot.

So up to Cape May, N. J., they whisked her, and spent the weekend taking shots. That is, when they weren's riding bicycles, swimming, and enjoying clambakes. We'll be watching, in a few weeks, to see what Life has made of it.

Meantimes, Dolores has been priming herself for her semi-final tryout on August 5 for the Miss Washington title.

WASHINGTON'S first regular remote television show from a hotel made its debut last Friday night, with Evalyn Tyner and her trio under the spotlight in the Statler's Embassy Room.

There couldn't have been a happier choice of subject, for Evalyn's style is strictly from her to you, personally.

The room was packed and people were waiting to get in. Technical difficulties were few; home base for WMAL-TV is just a half block away, and pick-up required little preparation. Two lights were all that had to be added, plus a television camera at the stage.

George Marshall, owner of the Redskins, was the guest, and turned out to be a star in his own right.

Evalyn got another big thrill last week. On Thursday, she received a card at the piano saying, "Young lady, you're one of the finest pianists I ever heard." Turning it over, she read the name of Gen. Jonathan Wainwright. She said it impressed her more than anything she's ever been told.

CAPITOL KORNCERT'S last concert of the season is tonight, and Connie B. Gay's hillbilly outfit is bringing in some special talent for the affair. The National Airport Terrace Room, where the shows are held, has been a happy choice as backdrop. It is air-condtioned to the near shivering point, and noise-proof. The glass-walled room on the roof gives a panoramic view of the airfield and the planes taking off and coming in, as added attractions.

Top billing in the concluding concert goes to the "Sons of the Pioneers" quartet, known for their renditions of "Tumbling Tumbleweed" and "Cool Waters," which they made famous. And there also will be "Shug" Fisher, the stuttering comic of western films, and the croonin', shootin' young man of the thrillers, Ken Curtis.

Catholic Bureau Given Custody of 'Hidden' Boy

Boston, July 26 (AP).—Gerald F. Sullivan, whose mother hid him in her home most of his 12 years to conceal his illegitimacy, today was given into temporary custody of the Catholic Charitable Bureau.

Probate Judge Frederick J. Dillon took this action in granting a petition of the boy's mother, Mrs. Anna F. Sullivan.

Prince Georges Rehearing Set On Apartment

Re-hearing of a petition for rezoning of an 11-acre tract in Beaver Heights for a 1½ million dollar apartment project was ordered yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners.

The petition, entered by David M. and Mary C. Peebles, was approved by the board at its monthly zoning hearings last Wednesday in Hyattsville.

Attorney T. Howard Duckett, representing the petitioners, said at that time the project would include 250 apartment units with a commercial center adjoining.

The re-hearing was ordered after a delegation from the Beaver Heights Citizens Association informed the commissioners the association "was misled and was not given all of the facts" by the tract's owners before it approved the re-zoning.

The group also contended that the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission had not notified the association of the hearing date, although this had been requested. The association did not have a representative at the hearing.

The commissioners for the second time denied an application for a pinball machine license by Attorney Robert W. McCullough for Hal B. Bell, 3424 Rhode Island ave. Mount Rainier.

The commissioners made the denial in the form of a motion which set forth the reasons for the denial. The minutes of the meeting show the application was denied because of a Circuit Court order "permanently enjoining this board from issuing any license."

It was pointed out that a legislative act authorizing such licenses was declared unconstitutional by Judge Charles C. Marbury on June 28.

McCullough said he will file proceedings "immediately" for a writ of mandamus ordering the issuance of licenses. Through this effort he hopes to bring the entire matter of pinball machine licensing before the State Court of Appeals, he said.

Virginia to Get Camp Escapee

Windell W. Smith, 25-year-old carnival roustabout under indictment in Prince Georges County on a sodomy charge, will be turned over to Virginia authorities, Deputy Sheriff R. Earle Sheriff said yesterday.

Smith confessed to Prince Georges police after his arrest July 15 that he had escaped from a Virginia prison camp in May. He was serving 18 years for murder and larceny.

He was arrested here while working with a carnival in Maryland following a complaint of a 13-year-old boy.

Vicar Refuses To Marry Her

ANGELA LANSBURY, British-born Hollywood actress, and her fiance, Peter Shaw, a set designer, flew to London yesterday to be married, but the vicar of Bow Street Church refused to perform the ceremony because she had been divorced. They were looking for another church. Miss Lansbury, shown here in a recent Hollywood photograph, was divorced from Actor Richard Cromwell in 1946

Montgomery To Try 1-Man Police Cars

Beginning next Monday, Montgomery County will launch an experimental program of "one man police cars" during the daylight shift.

County Manager Irving G. McNayr told the county council yesterday that from that, one instead of two officers will man the cars from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m.

If the program works, he said, it may be extended to other shifts. He said the plan would make more policemen available for other duty.

McNayr pointed out that several cities of more than 100,000 population—among them Austin and San Antonio, Tex., Hartford, Conn., and Berkeley, Calif—are using one-man scout cars.

At its meeting yesterday, the County Council held a public hearing on its proposal to lay sidewalks in the Kensington Estates subdivision, assessing homeowners an estimated $15,208 for the work.

Of the 13 property owners who appeared, 6 spoke for the proposed sidewalks, and 6 opposed the idea. Sidewalks would be provided on both sides of Puller dr., Ambler dr., Ewell ave., Hebard st., Matthews lane, on the south side of Brookfield dr. and the west side of Summit ave.

Joseph Mathias, 4416 Ambler dr., said "about 90 per cent" of the 108 property owners the walks would serve "are in favor of the plan."

But W. L. Knickerbocker, 4310 Ambler dr., presented the council with a seven-man petition opposing the sidewalks. Knickerbocker said the money could be better spent on streetlights or a playground.

Penny in Gullet Left to Nature

Doctors last night decided to give nature first chance of helping two-year-old Barbara Lee de John, who didn't quite swallow a penny.

The coin lodged in her esophagus, food route to the stomach, creating more excitement than actual distress, they said.

Barbara was playing with an older cousin at her home at 2808 Naylor rd. se., when she was seen to put the penny in her mouth. Her mother tried to coax it out, but the little girl tossed her head negatively, and down it started.

The child "reddened up and started to choke," her mother said. That's when Mrs. de John called police. But even before the child was enroute to Gallinger Hospital she was breathing easily. X-ray photos disclosed the penny in the gullet, beyond danger of obstructing the windpipe.

Barbara, adjudged neither an emergency nor a charity case, was later shifted to Providence Hospital, where the doctors said nature generally takes care of such things less violently than they can.

If nature doesn't cooperate, they said, they can always resort to their instruments.

One on the Aisle—

W. C. Fields Was Simply Himself

By Richard L. Coe

YOU SHOULD CERTAINLY see the Little's revival of two W. C. Fields' comedies, "The Bank Dick" and "My Little Chickadee."

The temptation these intemperate days is to prop a halo over the tomato pate of the late comedian. This is understandable, because there are so few comics worthy of the name. W. C. was himself, which is more than the creations of gag writers and Hooper ratings can say of themselves. He was not one to be led, and I rather think he'd snort at his recent canonization. But there is little approaching individualism in our current funnymen, which accounts for the tendency to reflect that Fields was the funniest man who ever lived, a dangerous thought about anyone.

But both "The Bank Dick" and "My Little Chickadee" prove that he was an extremely funny man and that his humor was the triumph of individuality. He gloried in being himself.

"The Bank Dick" is a picture he made completely on his own eight years ago. As "Mahatma Kane Jeeves," he wrote a script that had little regard for isms and the "goodness" of the human race. He plays a man without conscience, whose bank-bilking makes him a respectable citizen. His wife, mother-in-law and daughter are whining termagants and he hates them wholeheartedly. For bankers, doctors, chauffeurs, movie directors and other respectable citizens he hasn't a shred of pity. There's nothing of the goody-goody in W. C.

Of the two, "The Bank Dick" is the more Fieldsian. In the Black Pussy cafe he lures a funeral bank examiner into a Michael Finn. He commiserates with a doctor who says that business is only fair, "haven't been any epidemics lately." He at last kicks his daughter in the shins.

Yet for all his hostility to our earthly paradise, there is something likeable in Fields. He has respect for other individuals so long as they have done with cant and hypocrisy. He accepts them on his terms, not theirs. Which is why we admire this unshackled spirit. That is the essence of his comic genius.

Although other commentators express scorn for the costar of "My Little Chickadee," Mae West, that seems to me unfair. While their chores are too obviously divided and Miss West's song is not amusing, she has that same attitude toward the phony in humanity. I defy anyone to watch Miss Mae buffing her fingernails without chuckling inwardly. As the heroine of a spoof on the Westerns, she is basely selfish and a tart comment on the carbon copy spate of Westerns that plague the entertainment seeker.

EDDIE DOWLING, who directed the first production of "The Time of Your Life," which included such then-unknowns as Gene Kelly and Celeste Holm, took opportunity yesterday to praise the company which surrounds him this week at Meridian Hill . . . Previously this summer he's acted the play with companies at Westport and Ogunquit, but of the three he's most disposed toward this week's set . . . He's considering a revival of this Saroyan play Philip Barry's "Here Come the Clowns" and some of his other prize-winning plays for seasons in Boston and Chicago this winter . . . Which, from the way things look now, means that if you're to see Eddie, this is your week.

THE NEW "REGINA" will be singing Gershwin tonight at the Watergate . . . In short, Jane Pickens, who's been signed by Producer Cheryl Crawford for the lead in Marc Blitzstein's musical version of "The Little Foxes" in the fall . . . Jane will be having the part so lustily bitten into by Tallulah in Lillian Hellman's mealy drama.

CHIEF TECUMSEH DEERFOOT will be leading a group of Indians from Pamunkey Reservation, near West Point, Va., in the first scene of "Under Three Flags." . . . This is the historical pageant going on Thursday and Friday nights at Culpeper as part of the county's bicentennial celebration . . . The Pamunkeys are one of two remaining tribes of the Powhatan Confederacy . . . Six years ago Deerfoot succeeded his dad, who was chief for 35 years.

THE WESTMINSTER PLAYERS make their bow in Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid" tomorrow night on the stage of the Western Presbyterian Church, 19th and H sts . . . Bob Stevens, a teacher at G. W. and C. U., has organized the group, designed the set and staged the play . . . There will be a three-night run for the cast, which includes Henry Danilowicz, Davie Rogers, Dorothy Ohliger, Perc King, Louis Teitel, Jack Schneider, Nadine Drake Patti Hines, Seabury Quinn and Charles Pfund.

BARBARA HAS IT BAD—The passion, vice, habit, whathaveyou of getting something for little plagues Barbara Stanwyck in her latest role, arriving on Keith's screen today. "The Lady Gambles" is the title, and among Barbara's men friends are Robert Preston and Stephen McNally

Georgia Mayor Says He Foiled Klan Kidnap With Shotgun

Donalsonville, Ga., July 26 (AP).—Night-riding Klansmen were accused today of attempting to kidnap the mayor of nearby Iron City.

Mayor C. L. Drake told of using an automatic shotgun to drive off seven or eight cars loaded with robed Klansmen. He said Klan members had tried to defeat him for office because he was opposed to Governor Herman Talmadge.

Drake said there had been persistent efforts to intimidate him through phone calls and letters.

The alleged kidnap attempt came about 3 a. m. on Sunday, July 17, Drake said.

Drake fired 12 or 14 shots. The robed men returned the fire, he said.

Rape Case Suspect Shot, Killed by Florida Posse

Perry, Fla., July 26 (AP).—Ernest Thomas, identified as the fourth Negro in the recent Groveland rape case, was shot and killed by a posse north of here today.

Taylor County Sheriff Bill Towles said Thomas was definitely identified as one of four Negroes who raped a 17-year-old housewife July 16 after beating and robbing her husband.

He said Thomas, who had been trailed by a large group of officers since Sunday night, was shot when he ran after being found asleep in the woods.

The Groveland attack on the young white woman resulted in a reign of white terrorism in the community for several days.

The three other Negroes are in custody.

An Irish Bar in Philly

'Small Beer,' at C. U., Brims With the Foam of Wisecracks

"SMALL BEER IN SPRINGTIME," the new play at Catholic University, is exactly what its title implies: a great deal of heady foam atop little substance. Like a glass of the amber fluid, it looks refreshing as an antidote for the hot weather but it leaves you wishing it had more body.

Dan Rodden and Joe Coogan, the authors, have collaborated in writing a three-act comedy which is really worth one act. They have padded and extended a singularly unoriginal situation with the use of some very appropriate and clever wisecracks which provide most of the laughs for the evening. Instead of concentrating on mining the humor inherent in their basic situation, they have superimposed extrinsic line wit upon it. The result is a demonstration of their comedic virtuosity which is quite pleasing to contemplate but which is eventually damaging to their final effort.

Basically, the plot is old hat: the story of a man who fixes a romance for a woman who is in love with him; at the last minute, dawn comes to the man and he is united with her. It is exactly this lack of originality which is at the root of this half-successful play. It is also manifest in the characters who bring the plot to life.

The man in the case is Willie Dooley, a middle-aged, garrulous, brogue-flavored windbag, who daily assails the injustices of the world from the stronghold of Tim Kilty's bar, the Galway Tap, in Philadelphia. Mellifluous and potent in his poetic command of the English language, Dooley daily sends letters to various local newspaper editors, dictating them to Kilty's old maid sister-in-law, Hannah. She is madly in love with Willie; he's too concerned with the cosmos to notice it.

Pat Carroll Scores

As Dooley, John Rodney of Hollywood is back on the CU stage where he made appearances as a student. His is a smooth performance of an oft-times overwritten character. A good voice, an ease and authority in stage presence, a fluid delivery of the bombast and a strong projection of the theatricality of the part he is creating are all positive assets which Mr. Rodney brings to the role.

Clearly the authors', and the opening night audience's favorite is Pat Carroll, as Edith. She plays with a brassy sauciness and a fierce aggressiveness which are pleasing to behold. Her bitingly incisive and cleanly-clipped articulation when she is delivering a line makes one wish that all the actors spoke as clearly.

Undemanding, Many Laughs

Mildred Wolf, as Hannah, does not clearly define her part. She seems incessantly vague and repressed, almost to a point where any comic possibility in the role are lost. Edward Justice, as Kellogg, is physically and tonally right for the part, but one wishes for a little more animation. Don Waters, as Tim, is competently adequate; he gets the humor and sense of all his lines, even though some are labored and far-fetched. One other player worth mentioning is Phil Scharper, who plays a neighborhood tout-barber.

Director Sally Scharper has done a good job of bringing the piece to life. She has given it a surface animation and vitality not inherent in the play as written. Granted some of her pictorial compositions have a certain sameness, she has still done well in the boxed-in set designed by the talented Jim Waring.

A final observation: You will enjoy "Small Beer" because it's right for the citronella circuit, trivial and undemanding, affording many laughs. As a matter of fact, it provides more laughs than most comedies we've seen this past season. But right now, without much rewrite, it is not enough for Broadway. JOHN M. COPPINGER.

Auto Purchasers Exempted From Sales Tax But Are Subject to 2 Per Cent Excise Levy

(Fourth of a series)

By [illegible] Zagoria
Post Reporter

Even with prices dropping on autos, operation of the family bus will become more expensive after Sunday.

Autos are exempted from sales tax, but are subject to an equivalent 2 per cent excise tax payable on issuance of a District title. This was enacted to discourage buying over the line to avoid sales tax.

The tax will be levied on the "fair market value" of the vehicle. District officials will interpret this as the retail selling price on new or used cars, including charges for all accessories furnished at the time of sale.

Residents who already own a car with District tags will not be required to pay the tax. If you purchase additional accessories they will be subject to a sales tax.

Cars received as gifts or through inheritance are exempted from the excise tax.

Service such as battery charging or grease jobs will not be taxed since the materials used represent only an "inconsequential element" of the total price. However, if transmission or differential grease is added, it is taxable. On an oil change, the oil is taxable.

Gasoline is exempt for use in motor vehicles, but is subject to sales tax when poured into boats, the sales tax administrator has decided.

On repair jobs, if the labor is separated from the parts on the bill, you pay tax only on the latter.

Some common problems:

Q. If I buy a car in Virginia and apply for District tags, do I have to pay the excise tax?

A. Yes.

Q. I own a car with District tags and plan to buy another for the wife. Do I have to pay the excise tax?

A. Yes, on the second vehicle.

Q. A Maryland resident moves into the District and applies for a Washington title. Does he have to pay the excise tax?

A. No, such cases have been exempted. However, he must clearly prove his previous Maryland residency.

Q. A District resident transfers title of his car to his wife. Does he pay a tax?

A. No, this is considered a gift and is exempted.

Q. When does the tax become effective? If I buy a car this week and apply for a title on Monday, do I become liable for the tax?

A. The tax becomes effective at midnight Sunday. You will be liable for tax since it is levied at the time of application for title. Better file before Friday afternoon since the office is closed over the weekend.

Q. If I buy a car for $1200 from a dealer and give my old car as a trade-in for $300 of this amount, how much is taxable?

A. The full $1200 is taxable since the trade-in is considered part of the selling price.

Q. A used car cavued in the "Blue Book" at $1500 is purchased for $1000. How much tax do I pay?

Twenty dollars since the actual price paid is considered the tax base. Selling prices will be routinely checked against the "Blue Book" to determine whether an attempt is being made to undervalue the car for tax evasion purposes.

Q. If I order a grease job at $1.50 and an oil change at $2, how much tax is collected?

A. Four cents since the grease job is not taxed.

Q. A vehicle is repaired for $75 including materials. Is a tax placed on the entire bill?

A. If the parts are listed separately, the tax applies only to the materials, otherwise to the whole bill.

have the fundamental right of electing their own government. This is the basic right of American democracy."

He then placed in the Congressional Record the appeal made by the Washington Home Rule Committee for prompt action on the Senate-approved home rule bill. He said the Washington group had been of great help to the home rule subcommittee he headed in the last Congress. He said their arguments for home rule "are unassailable."

First witness today will be Rep. Charles B. Deane (D., N. C.), a leader in the drive for approval of a home rule bill last year. Twelve other witnesses are scheduled.

Flier Crash Dives To His Death at Tomb of Wife

Stockton, Calif., July 26 (AP).—Riding the wings of death over his wife's grave, a young flier crashed his plane near her tomb, and died.

He was Russell Gilman Higby, jr., 23, son and partner of a wealthy produce merchant. He had been increasingly despondent since his wife died in childbirth four months ago.

Yesterday he took his father's small plane into the sky.

For an hour Stockton was terrorized. The ship rocketed over the city, sometimes skimming 10 feet above the pavement, then flitting in and out between tall buildings.

Then Higby raced his plane to the cemetery, on the north outskirts of Stockton.

He climbed for altitude and swooped earthward in a powerdive. The engine roared under full power. The plane crashed through a grove of trees a few feet from the grave and then virtually disintegrated.

Anti-Poll Tax Bill Passed

sissippi, Alabama, South Carolina and Tennessee could continue to levy poll taxes as they do now. But under the bill's provisions, they could not make the tax payment a condition of voting for President, Vice President or members of Congress.

Representative Hobbs (D., Ala.) tried to knock out the reference to primary elections and make the poll tax ban apply only to general elections. His amendment lost by a vote of 87 to 62.

Representative Sims (D., S. C.), 28-year-old freshman, challenged claims of proponents that the tax disfranchises millions of potential voters.

South Carolina's poll tax of $1, he said, is not cumulative, applies only to adult males and its payment is not a requirement for voting in primaries which in many southern States are "the real elections."

"The rise of the Ku Klux Klan in the South," Sims said, "is a direct result of President Truman's indorsement of the report of his civil rights committee."

Other opponents of the bill argued that the States alone have the right to determine the qualifications of their voters. They asserted the proposed law is unconstitutional. Joining in this argument advanced by southern Democrats was Representative Fellows (R., Me.).

Representative Brown (D., Ga.) called the bill "Federal intervention," and Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) said it followed "the Communist line."

Representative Davenport (D., Pa.) said he had waited 20 years "to say what I'm going to say." Then he told the House that only 2 per cent of the eligible voters in Mississippi voted in Rankin's district in the 1946 congressional election. Davenport said the main issue is "whether a narrow group of bigoted men will continue to control the destinies of their States."

When Davenport finished, Rankin congratulated him "for putting in 20 years accumulating so much ignorance."

The vote by which the House passed the antipoll tax bill included:

Maryland—Beall, Bolton, Fallon, Garmatz, Sasscer.

West Virginia—Bailey, Burnside, Hedrick, Kee, Ramsay, Staggers.

GUARD AGAINST THROAT-SCRATCH

greater length of fine tobaccos travels the smoke further... filters the smoke and makes it mild

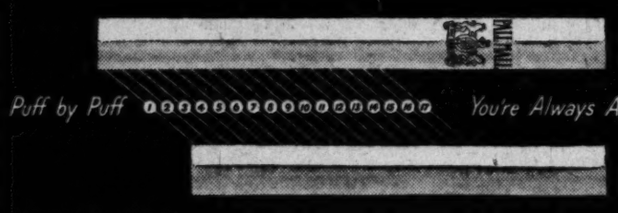
Don't let throat-scratch spoil your smoking enjoyment. You guard against it when you smoke PALL MALL. For PALL MALL's greater length travels the smoke further on its way to your throat—filters it naturally through PALL MALL's traditionally fine, mellow tobaccos—guards against throat-scratch.

Let your throat enjoy smooth smoking. PALL MALL's fine tobaccos give you a smoothness, mildness and satisfaction no other cigarette offers you. Ask for PALL MALL—the longer, finer cigarette in the distinguished red package.

PUFF BY PUFF... YOU'RE ALWAYS AHEAD
Take 5 puffs or 10... or 17... when you smoke PALL MALL



Study the puff chart... At the first puff, PALL MALL's smoke is filtered further than that of any other leading cigarette. Moreover, after 5 puffs of each cigarette—or 10, or 15, or 17—PALL MALL still gives you a longer, natural filter of fine tobaccos—guards against throat-scratch.

Outstanding—and they are mild!

Mr. Murphy's Successor

Twice before the death of Justice Murphy, President Truman had faced the solemn task of appointing a justice of the Supreme Court. On each occasion he sweated over the responsibility and came up with an appointment calculated to strengthen the court in the eyes of the public. When Justice Roberts resigned in 1945, the court was left with only one Republican member. Justice Burton was undoubtedly elevated to the high bench in order to minimize its lack of balance between the two parties. When Chief Justice Stone died, the first consideration in the President's mind was to end the feuding in the court. He thoughtfully canvassed the situation and named Chief Justice Vinson as an eminent administrator and peacemaker. Clearly, if the President follows this precedent, his appointment of a successor to Justice Murphy will be made not to please any individual or faction but to strengthen the court as an impartial judicial institution.

Since Justice Murphy was the only Catholic on the court, it is assumed that the President will seek a Catholic to take his place. Sound policy calls for some balance on the court as to religious affiliations and geographic origin, although neither of these factors is as important as the selection of men of wide legal experience and judicial temperament. Fortunately, there are plenty of able jurists adhering to the Catholic faith, for example, Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, Senator O'Mahoney, and former Solicitor General Charles Fahy. The former two have the added advantage of being from the West.

The most serious imbalance on the present court, however, is the presence of only one Republican among seven Democrats. Seldom, if ever, since its first organization has the court been so lopsided. That is why a number of distinguished judges and lawyers of Republican background are being mentioned for the place—for example, Robert P. Patterson, Mr. Truman's former Secretary of War; Chief Judge Orie L. Phillips of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, and Charles Evans Hughes, jr., a former Solicitor General. The sole reason for the almost complete Democratic monopoly on Supreme Court justiceships is that the Democratic Party has held the Presidency for more than 16 years. Such a long tenure for a single party creates a special obligation to avoid overloading the courts with appointees of one political background. If Mr. Truman is to make his choice from the viewpoint of the welfare of the court, it is difficult to see how he can escape taking this factor into consideration.

"Made In America"

The President's Council of Economic Advisers is due for a public psychoanalysis, if Senator Byrd has his way. This should provide the most fascinating congressional sideshow since the Hiss-Chambers confrontation. If we follow the Senator correctly, he thinks that the members of the council are responsible for President Truman's recent warning against deep cuts in Federal spending and he wants a congressional probe to find out if their "fanciful ideas" are "made in America." Now we ourselves have criticized individual members of the council from time to time, but not on the suspicion that their ideas are not homemade. Mr. Byrd's probe may not be quite as easy as the Senator supposes. Men have spent many an hour lying on the couch in the painful process called free association without ever finding out with any certainty where their ideas were made. We doubt that Senator Byrd has the professional skill, let alone the patience, to conduct a probe of this peculiarly subtle and complicated character.

Senator Byrd appears to consider the council a sinister and secret body functioning on shadowy and suspicious grounds. "These men—who seem to be dictating the Administration's economic program—are not elected officials," he declared ominously in a radio interview the other evening. "The public knows little of them—their backgrounds and beliefs. Yet they are apparently in positions of great power in Government. Cloistered in the White House, aloof from and not responsible to the electorate, they are spinning economic ideas which vitally affect us all." Makes one shiver, doesn't it? Yet much the same thing might be said about the Bureau of the Budget, for example, or the National Security Council. They are cloistered, in positions of great power, and nobody elected them.

One cannot help wondering from this where Senator Byrd's ideas are made. The Congress of which he is a member created the Council of Economic Advisers under the Employment Act of 1946. According to the Congressional Directory, under the terms of this act, the council, among other things, "develops and recommends to the President national economic policies to maintain employment, production and purchasing power." Whatever the origin of its ideas, the council itself seems plainly to have been made on Capitol Hill.

Atomic Isolationism

The monopoly myth in respect of atomic energy continues to beguile men otherwise realistic and astute. This is the myth that the atomic bomb is a sort of genie emitted from a corked bottle by a know-how peculiarly American and retainable in that bottle until such time as peculiarly American interests call for its uncorking again. More than two years ago Bernard Baruch did his best to dispel this illusion. "There was one thing," he said, "I wanted to impress upon the Senate—which should be impressed upon the American people—and that is what the scientists have told us so often: that the secret cannot be kept forever—that it isn't one that can be wrapped up in an envelope and kept hidden in a box in a safe and brought out at any desired time."

Yet here we have Senators Tydings and Hickenlooper and Knowland furiously demanding legislation to keep the President from giving any information about the production of atomic bombs even to the allies who were partners in the research leading to its original creation. On a radio broadcast Sunday, Senator Tydings said, "I think that is a weapon that is ours. We have the know-how, we are making them, we have the planes to deliver them, and it would be foolish to duplicate this effort over and over again in other countries, even though they could."

Of course, it would be foolish to duplicate this effort in other countries. But the only way to avoid such senseless duplication is to continue the partnership in accordance with which Canada and England agreed during the war that actual production of atomic bombs be centered in the United States. They are entitled to share in the fruits of that partnership as they shared in its costs and its hopes. If they cannot have atomic security as partners, they can scarcely be blamed for seeking it as rivals. And the end result of that sort of rivalry can be only the very kind of division among the nations of the West which has been so zealously sought by the East. Security lies not in a panic secrecy but in coordinated and sustained supremacy in utilization of the raw materials, the production facilities and the scientific knowledge which can be the exclusive possession of no one country.

A Policy On Arms

The "something-for-everybody" arms program calls for a reexamination of the principles that should govern and make an arms policy.

First, any cost should come out of the military budget—as a safeguard both of the economy of the United States and of its civilian institutions. Sometime ago Dr. Nourse, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said that MAP should not be "a simple addition to other military plans as they stood before the new alignment." This seems to us sound economics. The aim of military assistance to Europe, indeed, should be to lighten the budgetary load on the United States. Arming Europe, as General Bradley has said, should be so directed that the arms "will be of greater value to our own security in Europe than if they remained in our storehouses here." Strategically, therefore, the cost of arms to Europe could be safely deductible from the domestic military budget.

It follows, secondly, that the aid should go to a collective organization, not to separate national establishments. A military alliance is already in existence among the so-called Brussels powers, pending the establishment of the new bodies under the Atlantic Alliance. There is the nucleus of the planning organization in France at Fontainebleau. But no nexus is observable closer than coordination. This word, which has become a sort of poultice-word, is used frequently in the State Department booklet explaining MAP. Coordination is not sufficient if it does not involve an actual pooling of resources.

Article 9 of the Atlantic Pact, which spells out Article 3 containing a promise of "self-defense and mutual aid," would establish a permanent council representing all the parties. This would then set up a defense committee which would produce a system of mutual aid. The system ought to provide for a single strategy, a single general staff, and division of labor in building up the defense implements. For instance, the United States could be left to make the atom bombs (though stockpiling in western Europe ought to be envisaged), Belgium could make the tanks, France the small arms, Britain the jet planes, and so forth.

Such a system is the only kind of coordination that would serve the defense needs of the Atlantic Community. It would be putting the cart before the horse to send arms to national armies simply on a basis of coordination. This was done when ECA was initiated. Europe's OEEC coordinates, but has not integrated, and has shown no disposition to unite, Europe. American aid without a militarily united Europe would invite the same risk that integration would be forgotten. In that case the arms would accomplish no strategic purpose. As we understand it, the strategic purpose of arming Europe is to insure that the Soviet would have to mobilize (with all that that means in time and organization) in the event of a decision to attack western Europe. Arms alone would not suffice; only arms plus a continental organization. This is the only way of deterring the Russians or, alternatively, of producing American support instead of American liberation. European opinion given from time to time to this newspaper is that for modern defense western Europe must treat itself as an entity and train superguerilla, or small formation units, all interconnected and responding to a central command.

A third desideratum is that European rearmament should not interfere with European recovery. Several times this assurance was given to this newspaper in response to inquiries when MAP was in the planning stage. Yet in the MAP booklet this is said:

> It is anticipated that additional military production will result in some curtailment in the production of consumer goods, both for local consumption and for exports. The participating nations expect to take steps to absorb most of the losses arising from these diversions, but their capacity to do so is limited.

Diversion of European energies to munition making would help to put the military in seats of authority over the civilian as well as cramp recovery. Let us be under no illusion about that. The danger is real enough even in this civilian-minded country, let alone among the recipients of American arms and military missions.

The final consideration to be taken into account in making MAP serve what the State Department calls "an action policy" is that arms are not enough as the cement for a supranational community. Only an idea can do this, and that idea is not anti-anything, let alone anticommunism; it is freedom and union. A resolution was presented yesterday in the Senate calling for a convention of the free nations to consider such a union. If there were such a federation, we feel there would be peace for another century. Certainly there would be no Russian menace to worry about, no German problem to solve. As it is, an arms program on the proposed catch-all scope, administered with no policy in sight beyond "containing" Russian communism everywhere whenever administrators or Congress sees or thinks it sees any anti-Communist regime anywhere endangered, would be the introduction of a bull in the world's china shop.

It is time that America's great sallies into world affairs were aimed at achieving something constructive—of realizing a positive policy. The cart was put before the horse in the $3.75 billion loan to Britain; the British, unlike a business enterprise, borrowed money without consolidating their indebtedness, and the loan is now gone, with the sterling debts still hanging like a millstone, unfunded, around the British neck. ECA was put through in the hope that a working economy for Europe would be organized. This organization is even more distant today than when ECA was legislated. Let us make haste slowly this time until the Europeans have met the conditions which are everywhere acknowledged to be in the common interest—of Europe as well as in the United States and Canada.

White Paper

The delays over the issuance of the White Paper on China are freely interpreted as due to revisions. One wonders about the nature of the revisions. The purpose of a White Paper, presumably, is to inform the American people—those who, according to President Truman's eloquent introduction to his foreign affairs speech last week at Chicago, make the "enlightened public opinion" on which "our foreign policy is founded." This is a matter of compilation, not revision. It is not to be expected, perhaps, that editing will be eschewed when a foreign office is left to issue documents, as it is when outside historians are brought in. But such self-denial is implied by the lip service that is so often paid to the public as the formulators of foreign policy. To quote Mr. Truman again: "Public opinion in a country such as ours cannot be ignored or manipulated to suit the occasion."

Another curious side issue of the delay over the publication of the White Paper is the representation made to the State Department by the Chinese Embassy and Senator McCarran. The former thinks the White Paper would give aid and comfort to the Chinese Communists. The Nevadan wonders whether the time is opportune for publication—meaning that he thinks it isn't. Yet, so far as we recall, Senator McCarran, along with a score of other Senators, has been yelling his head off for two years past in denouncing the State Department in part for withholding one of the central documents in the White Paper, viz., the Wedemeyer report. The public is entitled to the record and the whole record, because, as Mr. Truman said in his exordium at Chicago, "the people must be given ample opportunity to discuss the issues and reach a reasoned conclusion."

REMNANTS

We'd meet occasionally we two,
To reminisce, and for the time grievances of our invalidism
Were forgotten, and the likeness of our old familiar selves
Would come through.
Unlike me he was tall and lean.
The youngest of the four of us who had attained our places
In the sun.
Before Corregidor, I mean.
We'd never speak of the other two.
Of the one who took the wrong
Way out, or of him who
Mumbles incoherently of things long gone.

Sales Tax Revenues

I am annoyed and disgusted with the "buy now and beat the sales tax" theme featured in the advertising of some of the city's establishments.

Whether the sales tax is or is not the ideal way to solve Washington's financial problem is not the question. We have the law and it deserves at least a fair trial. But to invite people to increase their purchases just prior to the time it goes into effect will nullify to some extent the revenues expected to be derived from it.

The city fathers found out—even as you and I—that things cost more, and figured out a way to meet the bills. What's more, they found a way that affects everybody instead of the old system under which only the local residents carried the ball. Any patriotic Washingtonian will defer his major purchases until the tax becomes effective, instead of rushing out now in order to put a few dollars in his own pocket at the expense of his neighbors and the city he calls home.

"Frank Murphy"

There are a number of folks, we believe, who will agree that the late Justice Murphy was a greater humanitarian—than lawyer and judge.

Those of us who believe that the greatest good to the greatest number is achieved by written constitutions and laws cannot agree that deviation from constitutions and laws, or warped and twisted constructions of them to nearer approximate a propaganda supported ideology, are justified by judges on the bench.

The makers of our Constitution, rightly we think, contemplated that adherence to law was fundamental. That the executive, the Congress and the judiciary had their defined divisions. That new ideologies ought not to have control of courts, until the people have, within the Constitution, within principles of democratic government, and within majority rule, arranged repeals, revisions and amendments of the Constitution and laws to make the amended documents the "written law of the land." Aid To Shipping

Mr. Nelson Cruikshank, director of social insurance activities of the AFL, has written a most interesting and provocative letter which you published in your July 15 edition.

No industry group in the United States has opposed the so-called welfare state more strongly than the American shipping industry. This industry, or more correctly, segments of it, do get certain aids from the Government in the form of construction and/or operational differential subsidies. These are direct subsidies, open and above board, and not hidden as are some other Government aids.

For ship operational subsidies American steamship lines have received in the period 1934-48 only 17/100 of 1 per cent of all Government payments to American industry and agriculture. Over 75 per cent of operational subsidies have gone to meet heavy wage costs aboard American ships to enable the American merchant marine to exist and compete with cheap foreign labor standards. As for construction subsidies, they have resulted in more than 245 American ships being built in American shipyards at American labor's wages and working conditions.

I cannot understand why Mr. Cruikshank singles out the ship operator as the exclusive beneficiary of Government expenditures for ocean-going navigation aids and weather information. Among the most urgent advocates for such information have been the men who sail and navigate American ships, both commercial and military, who feel they are entitled to adequate information from their Government in order to provide greater guarantees to their own safety, as well as to cargoes and passengers. Weather information is a subject of universal interest; otherwise newspapers would hardly carry a "front page ear" devoted to weather prognostications.

Crimeless Oath

Now that swearing has become at last respectable and the whole Nation pins its faith on saving us from bolshevism through swearing loyalty oaths, why not go the whole hog and swear loyalty to a crimeless way of life in general.

The all-embracing oath should read as follows: "I do not believe in any form of violence, whether the overthrow of the United States Government or cutting my wife in four pieces and stuffing them in a trunk, whether slashing 4-year-old boys' throats with broken vodka bottles or raping 5-year-old girls, nor do I believe in telling lies to the State Department or my wife and mistress (for those who have mistresses).

No decent American will hesitate to sign such an oath, and with the complete vanishing of all crime the American way of life will become the envy of the rest of the world and not even the wildest lunatic will be advocating the overthrow of the United States Government.

"Shanghai Lesson"

Your July 13 editorial entitled "Shanghai Lesson" distinctly conveyed the impression that The Washington Post favors the Chinese Communists. Your subsequent "editor's note" to a letter signed by "Realist" in your issue of July 17 tended to strengthen that unfortunate impression.

The note explained that when your editorial advocated "making sure that the Communists are contained within their own confines," containment meant that we are to check any aggression against non-Chinese territory. One might ask then, why does The Washington Post wish to protect Hongkong? And one certainly is tempted to ask what it is that keeps The Washington Post from favoring a policy to check aggression against the Chinese people and its legal government when such aggression is generally recognized as masterminded, instigated, and aided by a foreign power.

The Washington Post's policy is given briefly as: nonintervention, anticolonialism, antiaggression, and cooperation with Western powers. The nonintervention stand is highly suspicious for two reasons: one, that it is identical with the regular Communist propaganda line on China and, another, that it renders two other policies — anticolonialism and antiaggression—null and void. What, for instance, is the point in making a big noise about being against aggression if, in the first place, you are a noninterventionist and, therefore, would not favor doing anything in the event of an act of aggression? As to The Washington Post's policy of favoring those who cooperate with the Western powers, it certainly cannot apply to the Chinese Communists in Shanghai, who administered a beating to our vice consul and then said: Let that be a lesson to all other Westerners!

Cardinal Spellman's Attack

Cardinal Spellman certainly used poor judgment when he attacked Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and accused her of being an "anti-Catholic" and prejudiced against the Catholic church because she expressed her opinion in favor of Congressman Barden's bill to grant public aid only to public schools. As well might he have accused Mrs. Roosevelt of being prejudiced against Seventh Day Adventists, or the Lutheran, Episcopalian and a half dozen other Protestant denominations that would be entitled to receive benefits from Government aid to church schools, which the Barden bill prohibits, and rightly so.

When Cardinal Spellman laid the sin of Catholic prejudice at the door of Mrs. Roosevelt he greatly overshot the mark, and his boomerang came back on his own head. He is the one who is guilty of the sin of religious prejudice against everyone who does not agree with his own opinion.

As former Governor Lehman of New York, in answering the cardinal's attack upon Mrs. Roosevelt, said, the issue is not whether the Government shall support religious institutions from the general tax fund or not, but the issue has resolved itself into whether or not a person has a right to express his or her opinion on legislation pending before Congress without being accused of being an "anti-Catholic," provided the cardinal is in favor of such legislation.

C. S. LONGACRE.
Washington.

Is it possible that a man with the cardinal's education and background actually means what he says when he uses the word "bigot" so freely and castigates as anti-Catholic and prejudiced those who disagree with him; or is he saying these things in order to generate a crusade against those who believe in the traditionally American practice of keeping church and state separate? Whatever his motive, there is little to gain and much to lose by the tactics he has been using.

Anyone who is familiar with Catholic doctrines and teachings knows that the hierarchy is never satisfied in any country until it achieves a union with the state and the government support which that entails. However, Cardinal Spellman is throwing caution to the winds and is unwittingly awakening some individuals to the danger represented by his attitude.

No one who is in the least fair-minded wants to deprive the Catholic church of any legitimate benefit or discriminate against it in any way. Those who believe in "no public funds for parochial schools" apply it to all religious organizations, large or small. No person who is sincere can call that anti-Catholic, anti-Protestant, or anti-Jewish.

The diversion of public funds to parochial schools would lead to other more serious alliances between church and state with the result that religious liberty as we know it now would be a thing of the past.

How America Wants To Live

By Malvina Lindsay

If Ships Come In—

IF I HAD a million—yes, the answer would be easy. But what about 8 per cent more for the average family? Where would it go? For a new gadget or an extra bedroom? Weekend splurges at beaches and night clubs, or more milk and a new overcoat?

The Twentieth Century Fund's recent survey of the Nation's needs and resources says an 8 per cent increase in national production over what is normally expected by 1960 could make possible adequate standards of food, housing, education and medical care for every American.

The average citizen of this country who now, according to the fund, has the "highest standard of living ever attained by man" expects his standard to keep on improving. It has been doing that through the years, and especially since the last war began. Even before the war the average American worker had a real income two and a half times as much as 81 per cent of the world's workers enjoyed.

GRANTING that production here could be stepped up the extra 8 per cent in the next 10 years and the results widely and justly distributed, what would be the living changes we might expect?

Those who despair of Americans' rising above materialism and triviality probably would predict a beefsteak in every refrigerator, gooey cakes and pies in every pantry, candy bars in every pocket, a fur coat in every closet, a television set in every shack and tenement, a fat, flashy motor car in the yard of every drab dwelling.

Yet the pattern of spending in this country has been showing surprising sobriety and good sense in the last few years—years that have seen Americans possessed of huge purchasing power. The obsession with gadgets that characterized the 1920s and the hectic splurging of the early part of the war boom are not likely to be repeated—at least not with an 8 per cent impetus.

Probably the first step of the average family with a little more money would be to put better food on its table. It would even be likely to get more milk, fruit and vegetables along with its meat, cakes and pies. For the Department of Agriculture has found in its recent research in food and clothing, aimed at raising living standards, that people in this country are not only eating more but better chosen food.

This nutrition upcurve has come since 1942. Food money is being spent more wisely and more on the protective foods, though there are yet many weak spots in the American diet.

BETTER clothes would no doubt get second chance at the 8 per cent. They would be needed, too, for the fund's survey shows that a city worker now expects to get a new overcoat every five years, one suit every two years, and his wife a heavy coat every four years, two blouses and one nightgown a year. (And one third of people won't even have that much by 1960 unless the 8 per cent miracle comes to pass.)

Possibly even before clothes, the average family would try to get a better house. Everyone wants more room. Home builders report that nearly every would-be purchaser, no matter how skinny his pocketbook, aspires to a two-bedroom house. Today's yearning for space and privacy is in contrast to the 1920s trend toward cubicle living.

Children would get a big chunk of the 8 per cent increase. Food and medical care especially would be bought for them. The child welfare educators have done their work well, for the mother of today seeks milk, orange juice and sunshine for her baby no matter how the family pinches.

Motor cars, household appliances, all mechanical aids to easier living would get in on the 8 per cent. But how about education, medical care, religion, culture? They, too, would expand in the average household, though they probably would be at the bottom of the list. For people will even buy books when they have the money, as wartime sales showed.

It looks as though people could be trusted to make the best use of the extra 8 per cent—if they could get it. But if production is to be cut to promote scarcity to hold up prices, they will never get it. Nor will they get it if all the middle aged and older workers are to be retired from active duty and the age of hiring hiked at the bottom. For wonderful as machines are in raising output of goods and services, they can't increase production enough to keep pace with a steadily growing surplus of nonproductive manpower.

"Home Of The Brave"

The Trans-Lux Theater has booked as its next attraction the motion picture, Home of the Brave, a film that emphatically condemns racial discrimination and bigotry. This picture is to be shown at the Trans-Lux Theater to a "whites only" audience. Home of the Brave is not fictional, rather it illustrates a real and living problem which exists for our largest minority group.

Home of the Brave affords the Trans-Lux Theater a unique opportunity to change its policy without fanfare.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Aid-to-Education Controversy

AS HISTORY has shown repeatedly, the fires of religious conflict, once lighted, are difficult or impossible to check. Disquieting signs of hostility between Protestants and Roman Catholics have been multiplying since the end of the war until they constitute today a clear and present danger.

Childs

Cardinal Spellman's attack on Mrs. Roosevelt will certainly not restrain what threatens to become an open feud with increasingly unhappy manifestations. It is likely to have quite the opposite effect.

In this country where so many minorities live side by side tolerance is essential to peaceful existence. If the spirit of live-and-let-live is supplanted by mutual hatred and reprisals, then no minority will be able to feel secure.

The immediate cause of the present strife is the aid-to-education bill in the House. A clause in the bill approved by a House committee would limit Federal aid to public schools. This has led many Catholics to believe that unfair discrimination is intended.

A CAREFUL examination of all the circumstances should disabuse any fair-minded person of this belief. But the controversy seems to have gone beyond that issue to a point of bitterness calling for a compromise agreed to by all sides.

A reasonable solution can still be found. Step No. 1 is for the House to pass the proposed Federal child health bill. This provides 35 million dollars to be allocated to the States on the basis of the number of children attending private and parochial as well as public schools.

Representative Graham A. Barden of North Carolina, whose education bill is under Catholic attack because it is limited to public schools, says he is for the health measure. Thereby, according to those working to effect a compromise, he gives proof that he has no religious prejudice but is basing his stand on aid to education on legal and constitutional grounds.

This would open the way for step No. 2. That is passage by the House of the 300-million-dollar aid-to-education bill already approved in the Senate.

The Senate bill allows the separate States to determine whether the Federal aid goes to all schools or whether it is to be restricted to public schools. Thus, in some States the law provides that money raised by State taxes shall go to provide school buses for children attending parochial and public schools.

This is a recognition of the differing pattern in the different States. In, say, Louisiana or Rhode Island the proportion of children attending parochial schools is far larger than in, say, Vermont or Iowa. It would be unfair, so the argument for the compromise goes, to impose a Federal dictum that would cut across these differing patterns.

QUITE APART from theoretical argument, the actual fact is that the only hope for desperately needed Federal aid to the schools is through the compromise approach adopted in the Senate. And if the current conflict continues to boil up, even that chance is slim.

One unhappy aspect of the present controversy is that it tends to emphasize the separateness of minority groups. It seems to confirm the pessimistic view that the clash of minorities, jealous of special rights and special status, would not yield to the "melting pot" but would grow sharper and more uncompromising.

In choosing a justice for the Supreme Court to succeed the late Frank Murphy, President Truman confronts this problem. While the statement has been made that the President inevitably would nominate a Catholic to succeed Murphy, who in turn succeeded Justice Pierce Butler, a Catholic, that is not at this moment a foregone conclusion.

The President is said to be troubled by the concept that a seat on the court should be assumed to belong to one or the other minority, thus again underscoring the separateness of interests rather than the common citizenship of all Americans. Letters to the President from Catholics have expressed this same point of view since Justice Murphy's death.

In many ways Justice Murphy in his career was a living refutation of the theory of separateness and special status. He was one of the radicals on the court, repeatedly championing unpopular beliefs. This suggests what seems to me to be the reality—that there is far greater diversity of opinion within the minorities than we are ordinarily led to believe. And this would, in turn, seem to make possible a workable compromise on this most difficult issue of aid to education.

Matter Of Fact

The Mess

Rangoon, Burma.

"ANYBODY, when asked about the political situation in our country," remarked Burmese Premier Thakin Nu recently, "will answer that it is an awful mess. There can be no other answer." This ranks as about the frankest statement on record by any chief of state—and also the most accurate. The situation in Burma is the messiest in Asia, which is saying a great deal. Yet the mess is not, essentially, a hopeless mess.

It looks hopeless enough on the surface. What is going on in Burma is not so much a civil war as a kind of nation-wide riot. No less than five major groups—and countless minor groups—are taking part in the riot. To give some notion of just how messy the mess here is, the major groups may be briefly listed and described.

1. The government, or what is left of it. The higher officials of this government can be found crouching in a comfortable concentration camp, surrounded by barbed wire and armed guards, in the suburbs of Rangoon. Even inside this concentration camp, as Thakin Nu has also plaintively remarked, the government officials sleep with revolvers under their pillows. Such precautions are necessary simply because most of their predecessors have already been assassinated.

These officials are not, by nature, violent men. Like Thakin Nu himself (who has a strong and not unnatural desire to retire to a Buddhist monastery) they are bookish left-wing intellectuals whose knowledge of government, before they inherited power from the British, was derived wholly from the printed word. They are now learning certain lessons which were not spelled out in the Socialist tracts they read in their university days. In the process of learning, however, they have completely lost control over the country they are supposed to govern.

2. The White Flag Communists. The Communists were the first to take up arms against the government. This they did in the late spring of last year, at about the same time that the Communists in India, Malaya and Indonesia also resorted to "direct action," obviously as part of Moscow's over-all strategy for Asia. The White Flag Communists are the orthodox Stalinists and their leader is Thakin Than Tun, a former friend of Thakin Nu.

3. The Red Flag Communists. These are led by another former friend, Thakin Co. Thakin So is called a Trotskyite, but he is actually merely a proud fellow who refuses to take orders from Thakin Than Tun. The Communists have also split into warring camps in Indonesia and India and for much the same reason. This tendency of Asiatic Communist movements to split apart is interesting and may be significant.

4. The wartime resistance movement, called the Peoples' Volunteer Association. The PVA, like everything else in Burma, has come apart, splitting into the Yellow Band, unreliably loyal to the government, and the White Band, unreliably allied to the White Flag Communists. The White Band—and this again is a phenomenon common to all southeast Asia—consists largely of young men who discovered during the war that it is pleasanter to call yourself a hero and to rob villages than to work.

5. And most important, the Karens. Burma is a jumbled patchwork of races, and the three million or so Karens constitute one of the biggest patches. The Karens are the best fighting men in Burma. Recently they came within an ace of capturing Rangoon itself. The Karens want a semiautonomous state within Burma, which the government is willing to concede in principle. The trouble is that the size of the state the Karens want grows with their military successes. The Karens are far more powerful than the other groups fighting the government, and thus a settlement with the Karens is an absolute prerequisite to reestablishing the government's authority.

ALL THESE groups are intermittently fighting not only the government but each other. While this nation-wide free-for-all is in progress, the Chinese Communists are edging nearer the long, undefended Burma-Chinese border. Chinese Communist Chief Mao Tse Tung is reliably believed to have offered Thakin Than Tun a secret mutual assistance pact last February. The pact envisages material aid from the Chinese "People's Liberation Army" in "liberating" Burma. Thus it would seem reasonable to assume that the new Communist imperialism in Asia will swallow Burma as easily as a boa constrictor swallows a crippled lamb.

Yet, given certain conditions, this need not necessarily be so. The first and wholly essential condition is time, time to begin to clean up the "awful mess." Everywhere in southeast Asia, but especially here, it is blindingly obvious that any measures which may slow the advance south of the Chinese Communist armies are in the hard, practical interest of the United States and the whole Western world.

Edwards Preaches Sales Tax; Battle Woos Farmer Votes

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Horace H. Edwards continued to plump for the sales tax, and John S. Battle made a bid for the farm vote last night, as they campaigned for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Virginia.

The other two Democratic candidates in the August 2 primary did not take the stump yesterday. Francis Pickens Miller was reported on a hand-shaking tour of Carroll and Grayson Counties and had scheduled no speeches. Remmie L. Arnold made a non-political appearance at the Petersburg Shrine Club.

Speaking at Winchester, Edwards presented himself as "a spokesman for a great program"—the sales tax.

He told some 100 persons and a radio audience in the home territory of Senator Harry F. Byrd that his own 2 per cent sales tax program for schools is "not based on a lot of free-flowing political palaver."

To get needed schools, the people of Virginia must "either increase tax rates on one out of six persons now paying real estate taxes, or get the cooperation of the other five with a sales tax," Edwards said.

Election of State Senator John S. Battle, indorsed by Byrd, will mean "the tax load is going right back where it has always been—on the back of the farmer," said Edwards, who broke with the "Byrd organization" to run for Governor.

"There is no earthly advantage whatsoever in offsetting a legacy of better education by a legacy of debt," he said.

State Senator Battle said that if he is elected Governor he will "do everything I can to see that farm income is increased.

"The farmers are the only people who produce anything, and I shall do my best to see that they are fully recognized," he told a crowd of approximately 1000 persons at a political rally and barbecue sponsored at Franklin by the Battle-for-Governor Committees of Southhampton, Nansemond and Isle of Wight Counties, and the city of Suffolk.

Sharing the speakers' platform with Battle was J. Lindsay Almond, jr., who is seeking reelection as Attorney General.

Battle and Almond both renewed their attacks on Miller, for his comparison of Virginia's State government with that of Soviet Russia.

Turning to Edwards' advocacy of a sales tax, Battle said: "We are taking in 90 million dollars a year and spending 69 million dollars; are we treating the people right to speak of additional taxes? If you feel we should spend money we already have for school construction and should conduct the State's affairs on a businesslike basis, I solicit your support."

Big Annuity News to Him

unnamed Federal bankruptcy referee acquired his right to the pension bonanza by working one month—December, 1948—in a Congressman's office. Prior to that time the referee had earned from January 1 to June 30, 1937, a peak of $220,000 representing 15 of the disbursed funds of bankrupt companies as provided by law.

A check of newspaper files shows Ehrhorn handled the multi-million-dollar liquidation of the International Match Corp. during the 1930s

Before the passage of Public Law 464 on June 26, 1946, which took effect July 1, 1947, all Federal bankruptcy referees were in non-Civil Service positions and not eligible for pension benefits but received the 1 per cent fees. Public Law 464 gave the referees flat salaries of from $5000 to $10,000 with retirement benefits.

James E. Rossell, manager of the Second Civil Service region, explained by telephone today that such employes became eligible for retirement at 62 years of age cent of the yearly average salary of five years multiplied by the number of years of service.

Although civil service employees are required to pay 6 per cent of their monthly salaries, he said, anybody who served the government in a non-civil-service job and was later given pension benefits could forego back payments by accepting only 90 per cent of the annuity he would have received as a service employe.

Ruling May Shift Time Of Balloting

A ruling by Virginia's attorney general yesterday may change the hours of voting in Tuesday's primary election for nearby Virginia communities on Daylight Saving Time.

State election laws say that elections held in summer months will start at 6:30 a. m. and close at 7:30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time. This would mean 7:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. Daylight Saving Time.

In a ruling sent to Fairfax County officials yesterday, however, Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., said Fairfax County polls should remain open from 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m., Daylight Saving Time.

His ruling was based on the wording of the act under which Fairfax, Alexandria and Arlington adopted Daylight Saving Time. It stipulated that in these areas daylight saving time should control certain events, including elections.

Fairfax County officials immediately announced that county polls would be open during the hours listed by Almond, 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m., Daylight Saving Time.

Alexandria has already held one election under the summer hours, although its polls then opened at 7:30 a. m. and closed at 8:30 p. m. (daylight-saving time), an hour later than Almond stipulated for Fairfax. Alexandria City Attorney Joseph M. Pancoast stated, however, that Alexandria had adopted daylight-saving time under the same statute as did Fairfax.

H. Bruce Green, clerk of the Arlington County Board, said last night his office had ont been advised of any change in the voting hours. Sample ballots already printed carry the time 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. (daylight-saving time), he said.

Alexandria Accounting Faces Study

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The Alexandria City Council last night called for a complete study of the city's accounting system after learning it had ended 1948 with a $17,152 deficit instead of the $219,000 surplus it had counted on.

Report of the city's financial status was given the council in the audit of 1948 accounts just completed by the firm of Ernst & Ernst.

The fact that a deficit existed at the close of 1948 was not considered the most serious fact since the city started off the year with a deficit of $303,445.

The council voted to ask Ernst & Ernst to "begin immediately a study and revision of the general accounting system of the city" which would include the creation of a department of finance whose head would act as director of the budget.

The report confirmed a statement made last spring by R. Samuel Luckett, chairman of the council's finance committee, that the anticipated surplus was fictitious and that the city would have to save $400,000 this year to balance its budget.

The audit reported also:

1. Recommended creation of a central purchasing agent for the city. The city council created this office by ordinance last night.

2. Pointed out laxity in the office of the Commissioner of Revenue which it reported is two years behind in delivering delinquent personal property tax lists to the city collector.

In other actions, the council:

1—Blocked an attempt by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley to read his report of 11 sub-standard housing conditions in the city. Luckett contended that this was a matter for the city manager or the council's housing committee of which Beverley is a member rather than for the council.

2—Went on record as favoring construction of a bridge across the Potomac, connecting Alexandria with Anacostia.

Six More Arrested In Numbers Fraud

New York, July 26 (AP).—Police who smashed a crooked, 50-million-dollar-a-year numbers ring today nabbed Irving Bitz, 46, identified as a key figure in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

Bitz also identified as a former member of the Lepke murder gang, was seized with five others in a lightning series of arrests that already had netted 11 others allegedly implicated in the three-State swindle syndicate.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said the ring, master-minded from a sedate house in a fashionable section of Newark, N. J., was about twice the size of the once notorious Dutch Schultz policy racket.

Hogan said the ring's operators cheated their thousands of nickel-to-a-dollar customers by altering Cincinnati, Ohio, clearing house totals, on which the daily payoff was partly based. This greatly lessened each 'sucker's' 1-in-1000 chance of winning, the district attorney said.

Bitz was identified in today's police lineup as a circulation inspector for the New York Journal-American, and as "the celebrated Bitz who was mixed up in the Lindbergh kidnaping." The latter identification was made by Acting Police Captain Harry Hanley.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh accepted Bitz and Salvatore Spitale as "go-betweens with the underworld in trying to get their kidnaped son back in 1932. The child later was found murdered.

Hogan said Bitz also was a former member of the "Lepke mob." Louis "Lepke" Buchalter, associated with the "Murder, Inc." gang, was electrocuted in 1944.

Arrested with Bitz was Abraham Goldberg, 47, assistant circulation manager of the Journal-American.

Hogan said they and a third man, Anthony Strollo, whom he called "one of the top underworld figures in the East," split $670 a week for making sure the doctored payoff numbers were printed in the Journal-American.

Strollo was arrested yesterday in Cliffside Park, N. J.

Also arrested today on similar charges were Edward Kane, 44, pool room operator; Emilio Strollo, 61, brother of the confederate of Bitz and Goldberg; Jack Feldman, 48, cigar store proprietor, and Martin Martinson, 36, an employe of Kane's.

Those arrested yesterday included Daniel Zwillman, whose house in Newark was said to be the ring's headquarters, and Dennison Duble, secretary-manager of the Cincinnati Clearing House Association.

Duble, who had held the position for years, resigned today. Police said he admitted falsifying the daily clearing house totals so as to make the numbers ring's payoff to bettors as small as possible.

New Swindling Charge Faces Torrence

Wytheville, Va., July 26 (AP).—Another sadder but wiser woman put in a claim today that Ernest I. Torrence sweet-talked her out of all the money she had.

The newest complaint against the widely traveled ladies' man came from a woman in Texarkana, Tex., who said he took her for nearly $6000—and she even borrowed part of it for him.

Torrence, 57, and getting bald, is held in jail at Hillsville awaiting preliminary hearing on a charge that he swindled a Carroll County woman out of $2500 after wooing her by mail and asking for money for a Florida "land deal."

The husky six-footer and his slim, blond common-law wife, Mildred DeArmond Torrence, 28, are both wanted in Pennsylvania on an indictment charging that they made off with a Pittsburgh woman's life savings of $14,000.

Mrs. Torrence, who is held in jail here, has waived extradition and Pennsylvania authorities are expected to take her away with them tomorrow.

Urbana, Ohio, also has been heard from in the case. Authorities there notified Wytheville State police that Mrs. Torrence is under indictment on a charge of removing mortgaged property from Ohio.

State police Capt. Edward J. McDermott said he received a letter here today from the Texarkana woman in which she related that:

Torrence told her he had a big farm and a lot of cattle but no water for them. Then, turning on the charm, he asked could she, maybe, let him have some money to drill a well.

Torrence, who also is listed by several other names, was arrested nine days ago after an alleged attempt to pick up a woman in a railroad station at Gate City. Police said they found in his suitcase some 300 "lonely hearts" letters exchanged between Torrence and women in several States.

Alexandria Gambler Fined

Charles R. Keller, 37, called by Alexandria police a "big shot" gambler there, was fined $800 yesterday in Alexandria Police Court for operating a numbers game and taking horse race bets.

Police raided Keller's home at 25 E. Bellefonte ave. June 14 and confiscated two telephone, two adding machines, numbers slips and lists of horse race bets. The house had been under watch for some time, police said.

Judge James R. Duncan fined Keller $300 on the numbers charge, $500 on the horse race charge and imposed a 90-day suspended jail sentence on each charge.

Keller, circulation department employe of the Times-Herald, pleaded innocent on both counts but did not testify. His attorneys noted an appeal to the Corporation Court.

turns on household effects and jewelry, which, if you come "within a reasonable striking distance," he will not contest. The samples are computations over and above the basic $1000 exemption.

If you own a house assessed at $5000 the tax boys don't expect you have any jewels worth mentioning. An $8000 property is good for about $150 worth of jewelry; a $15,000 home, $350 and the owner of a $25,000 house is expected to list about $1000 in jewelry.

On the "total household effects" item, Martin will expect the following replies:

$5000 (assessed valuation) home—$100; $8000 home—$250; $15,000 home—$1500 and a house assessed at $25,000—$4000 worth of furnishings.

Martin admits that the District government must accept returns from apartment occupants in good faith. "We cannot figure a yardstick on apartments because the range is too broad," he explained.

But the city tax collectors do have a definite guide which they follow on the "boat" item. They expect to get a $40-per-foot appraisal on cabin cruisers. If you own a 30-foot cruiser the return should show around $1200. On sailboats the tax men have set a $20-per-foot expected evaluation.

Last night less than one half of the tax returns had been filed.

Martin looks for the big flurry about Friday noon.

Hyattsville Man Arrested In Rape Case

A 44-year-old Hyattsville man was arrested yesterday and charged with raping a 16-year-old girl.

The man, identified as Curry Joseph Carter, 4525 Buchanan st., was arrested by Hyattsville Policemen William A. Duvall, jr., and Elmer Thompson about 4 a. m. near the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Station in Hyattsville. With him in his car was the girl, they said.

A lookout had been broadcast for Carter, a Railway Express man, about 1 a. m. when the girl's mother reported she had not returned home.

Two other girls, 15 and 11, had told the mother that Carter had picked up all three in his car about 9:30 p. m., but had let the two younger girls out after driving to Bladensburg and purchasing a bottle of whisky, police said. All three girls are neighbors of the accused man.

The alleged victim told police she had been assaulted four times earlier while the automobile was parked near the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission pumping station on Tanglewood dr., just off Baltimore ave. at the southern edge of Hyattsville.

Carter is being held in the Hyattsville jail without bond pending a hearing Thursday.

Yeah, Again! Nats Lose 11th, 6 to 2

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL'S reputation as the worst-run big business in the world, with a public-be-damned philosophy so brassy it both shines and stinks, had another manifestation the other day with that thing in Brooklyn.

The Dodgers and Cardinals were playing at Ebbetts Field in the most crucial series of the season, and this was it—the battle for the league lead. More than 27,000 Brooklyn fans paid their way in. At the end of nine innings, with the game tied at 4-4, it was announced the game had been called to permit the two teams to catch trains for the West.

POVICH

Left with that feeling of blah and flim-flam, the customers squawked, but to no avail. The only concession they got was the announcement the game would be re-scheduled at a later date and they would be permitted to pay their way in again.

A pre-game agreement of the two clubs called for no inning to start after 4 p. m. But why the great need of wrapping it up at four o'clock. The business of catching those particular trains was uncalled for. With a bit of checking, I learned there were trains leaving New York at 7 p. m., or later, that would take the teams wherever they had to be the next day, with hours to spare. The fans were getting the business, again.

BUT THERE IS no need to wander as far as Brooklyn to post a squawk Washington fans got the same kind of deal a couple of times this season. They saw the Nats play the Red Sox only six innings, earlier this month, because of the time-limit in a night game, with the same excuse that there were trains to be caught.

In that last instance it was an unforgiveable piece of density by the front office management which had rescheduled the game from day to night to start with, and thus let the fans in for their unpalatable short-order of baseball. Clark Griffith acknowledged the boner by later announcing" there will never be another time-limit game in my park," but a bit of fore-handed thinking on the subject would have been smarter.

For the fans there can never be any protection against a bad ball game that might lack interest after the opening inning, and there is no proteetion either against a game shortened by rain. But shortening a game with no consideration for the customers because of a self-made necessity for catching trains is unpardonable.

AND SO, TO ANOTHER topic. There's a man on the Washington club battling for his job. He's the manager, Joe Kuhel, and by this time he knows he has no sinecure and could be let out in the most unsurprising fashion at the end of the season unless his team does a sudden about-face and saves his job for him again, as it did last season.

Kuhel wasn't going to be around as Washington's 1949 manager, it was virtually certain last September, when the Nats were involved in that horrendous 18-game losing streak. Clark Griffith obviously didn't like it, and was displeased not only with his club, but with Kuhel as well. He always did find it easy to displace managers of seventh-place clubs.

But late in the season, Kuhel found himself reprieved. The Nats, after breaking their losing streak, won seven of their last nine games impressively, and Griffith felt kindlier toward him. The same ball players who had put Kuhel's job in jeopardy, finally saved it for him with that late-season spurt that put Griffith in a happier mood.

IF, AT THIS POINT, Kuhel is not Griffith's idea of a good manager, then the reverse could also be true and Kuhel could be yearning for a smarter operation in the front office. Griffith hasn't given his manager much to work with and the fact that the Nats were wowing 'em earlier in the season as a first-division club could be a tribute to Kuhel.

Most of the Nats' troubles are traceable to the worst Washington pitching staff within memory. Griffith didn't equip Kuhel with much in that department and when the veterans Sid Hudson and Ray Scarborough sagged, the Nats were a gone gang.

There was some evidence lately, though, that Griffith was fed up with Kuhel's fetish for reversing his lineup against left and right-handled pitching, and it is significant that when the announcement came that it had ended, it came from Griffith's office, not Kuhel's. Where there is so much smoke, there may be some firing.

Cards Rap Phils, 9-5; Gain Game Over Bums

St. Louis, July 26 (AP).—The Cardinals' bats were hot tonight as St. Louis drove to a game and a half lead in the National League race with a 9-to-5 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Brooklyn's loss to the Cubs enabled St. Louis to add a full game to the half game margin held this morning.

Harry Brecheen wasn't the pitching ace of old, but with the hard hitting of Stan Musial, Red Schoendienst, Enos Slaughter and Glenn Nelson behind him he didn't have to worry

Brecheen allowed nine hits, three of them in the infield, and made an error that led to a run. Dick Sisler's first inning homer with a man on base and Buddy Blattner's four-bagger in the ninth frame were the most serious blows off Harry.

Musial and Slaughter each hit two doubles and a single, Nelson also had three for four and Schoendienst went them one better with four for five. Chuck Diering came up with a triple but was caught off third.

The Phils held a two-run lead until the last of the third when Schoendienst opened with his double. Loe Klein singled and Musial scored both men with a two-bagger. Slaughter in turn sent Musial howe with a single. Andy Seminick almost had Musial at the plate but dropped the ball as the Redbird outfielder barged past.

Dodgers Lose 4th in Row, 6-0

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Johnny Schmitz, who specializes in beating Brooklyn, did it again today with a seven-hit, 6-0, victory for the last place Chicago Cubs. It was the Dodgers' fourth straight loss, a new season high.

Three first inning runs off Joe Hatten were more than enough for Schmitz who has pitched each of Chicago's three wins in 13 meetings with Brooklyn.

Coming on the heels of the disastrous St. Louis series, the loss was a severe blow to the Dodgers' pennant hopes at the start of their third Western trip.

Singles by Frank Gustine, Frank Baumholtz and Andy Pafko, a fly ball and Roy Smalley's double rocked Hatten in the first. He was knocked out in the third when, with two out, Pafko doubled and Smalley tripled.

Jackie Robinson was the only consistent hitter, but his three singles came with nobody on base.

A fine weekday crowd of 32,972 saw the game.

Yanks' 45th Casualty

Tommy Henrich Breaks Toe, Will Be Out at Least a Week

NEW YORK, July 26 (U.P.).—The New York Yankees, one of the most battered teams ever to hang on to first place in the major leagues, today lost the services of their dependable first baseman, Tommy Henrich, who suffered a fractured toe and will be out of action at least a week.

Henrich was number 45 in a list of casualties which has plagued the league leaders from the start of the season. He previously had been on the list, having just recovered from a battered side and bruised knee.

His latest mishap occurred in batting practice last night when he was struck by his own foul tip.

In addition, Catchers Charley Silvera and Yogi Berra and First Baseman Jack Phillips all are ailing. Silvera has a twisted right ankle and an abrasion on his right knee while Berra still is below par with a lame side, and Phillips, the club's only other regularly assigned first baseman, has been out with bursitis.

Manager Casey Stengel said he probably would send Third Baseman Billy Johnson over to first, putting defensively weak Bobby Brown on third against both right and left-handed pitching. Brown usually plays only against right handers.

Only a few days ago, Rookie First Baseman Dick Kryhoski was sent to Oakland of the Pacific Coast League on 48-hour recall option and it is possible he may be brought back if Henrich is out of action more than a week.

Henrich's injury came when the Yankees were involved in an important series with the second place Cleveland Indians, who are now in a five-game winning streak and who cut New York's first place margin to three games with a 4-to-2 victory last night.

Frick Annoyed By Game Halt

New York, July 26 (AP).—The next time two National League clubs set a time limit on a ball game to catch a train, they'd better tell President Ford Frick in advance.

Frick was "annoyed" about yesterday's Brooklyn-St. Louis tie that was called at the end of nine innings and two hours before train time. The clubs neglected to inform Frick about the 3 p. m. (EST) deadline.

"I am writing letters to both clubs," Frick said today, "telling them to notify me when they plan any time limit games.

"There are no league rules to govern such a situation except that the game must be started 3½ hours before the train leaves. They did that all right. There is no rule saying when you must stop the game to make your train connection.

"We used to have a league rule on games that were stopped before a decision had been reached. We'd restart them at the exact point where play was stopped. They called them suspended games. But the clubs didn't like the rule and voted it out of the book."

Dodger officials were scanning the schedule today, trying to find a date for the playoff of the tie game.

St. Louis comes to Brooklyn only once more for a night game August 23 and a day game August 22, but the Dodgers date August 22 but the Dodgers are at Boston that day. The replay may wind up as part of a Tie game or no, all the figures went into the official records, including the paid attendance of 27,058 that boosted the Ebbets Field 1949 total to 1,010,349 for 50 home dates or a little better than 20,000 per.

Stranahan Wins Again

St. John, N. B., July 26 (AP).—Defending Champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, and Dick Chapman of Osterville, Mass., advanced easily today to the third round in the Canadian amateur golf championships, but a little known Quebec player provided most of the thrills.

Stranahan, who had drawn a first round bye, disposed of gray-haired R. L. Davison of Amherst, N. S., 8 and 7. After winning the first six holes, Frank quickly ran out the match in the manner expected.

Chapman won by the same score over Bob Gray of Saskatoon, Sask. R. H. (Sparky) Graham was the unheralded star. He eliminated the Dominion's No. 1 amateur, Walter McElroy of Vancouver. Graham erased McElroy's one-hole advantage at the 17th, then took the 18th when he drove the 220-yard hole and McElroy was caught in a sand trap.

Graham is a five handicap player whose chief accomplishment previously had been a consolation victory in the Quebec amateur.

Firing a 33 for the first nine holes, Bill Mawhinney of Vancouver breezed through his second round match with John Sayre of the Riverside home club, 8 and 7.

Ollie Kay, who came to Riverside with Stanahan in the defending champion's private plane, had his hands full before he could defeat E. H. Coler of Dartmouth, N. S., 2 and 1.

Buddy Lutz of Reading, Pa., fighting off a tendency to overshoot the greens, finally regained control of the back nine and defeated John Randles of the home club, 4 and 3.

Another scratch American player, John Kraft from Denver, Colo., went into the third round by winning 6 and 5 over G. B. Fairbrother of Toronto Summit.

Restelli Hits Homer, Bucs Win, 4 to 1

Pittsburgh, July 26 (AP).—Four was a lucky number for the revitalized Pittsburgh Pirates tonight. They used just four hits to defeat the New York Giants, 4 to 1, and win their fourth straight victory.

Pirate Dino Restelli hit his ninth homer of the year with one aboard in the fourth. Ernie Bonham won his sixth game against two losses. Andy Hansen, who gave way to Kirby Higbe in the fifth, was the loser.

An overflow crowd of 35,041 saw the Pirates get their home stay off to a happy start.

Bobby Thomson's seventeenth home run of the year put the Giants in front in the fourth, but the Bucs went ahead in their half on Restelli's blast. Johnny Hopp, who had singled, scored ahead of him.

The Pirates upped the count to 4-1 in the fifth when they chased Andy Hansen.

A's Win Out Over Browns In 10th, 5-4

Philadelphia, July 26 (AP).—Sam Chapman's single with two out in the tenth inning scored Eddie Joost from second with the run that gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 5-4 decision over the St. Louis Browns tonight.

Joost started off the game with his twenty-first home run of the season and before the A's were retired in the first they had collected two more runs.

But they had to come from behind to tie the score in the ninth as Rookie Southpaw Alex Kellner went the route for his fourteenth pitching decision and his fifth of the year over the Browns.

Joe Ostrowski was in trouble all the way as he gave up 13 hits with Ferris Fain getting four to pace the A's attack. He held the Mackmen at bay, however, after the first until the ninth when Mike Guerra singled Chapman home with the tying run.

Veteran outfielder Wally Moses of the A's collected his 2000th major league base hit tonight when he nicked Joe Ostrowski for a single in the fifth inning.

The hit was Moses' forty-third of the season. Only two other active players—Luke Appling and Dixie Walker—have hit safely 2000 or more times.

Appling had 2571 hits and Walker 2013 at the start of the season. Ty Cobb holds the major league record with 4191.

McDermott missed his second shut out when he let up in the ninth and permitted Cass Michaels to hit his sixth homer of the season and then walked in the second run with the bases loaded.

Gray Hurls 5-Hitter for Tigers; Kozar Hits Homer

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The NATS did it, folks.

They went out and got beat again last night and that made 'em the undisputed losingest team in the major leagues this year.

The 6-2 licking the Detroit Tigers handed them made it 11 in a row and no other major league team can make that statement.

Until last night, the NATS had to share the 1949 record for futility with the last place St. Louis Browns, but now it's Washington's, all Washington's.

It was not only their eleventh straight licking, but their seventeenth in the last 19 games and twenty-fifth in the last 30. Rather consistent to say the least.

Gray Is Victor

Twenty-two-year-old Ted Gray, Detroit's homegrown lefthander, threw a sizzling five-hitter at them while his Tigers waded into three Nat pitchers for 12 hits to bring the young Michigander his seventh success.

Only one of the hits the Nats got off Groay was a single. Also thrown into the collection were two wasted doubles, a triple and a home run.

Al Kozar supplied the homer, an inside the park wallop in the first inning which staked Paul Calvert to a lead he lost and never regained in the second inning.

Gettel Touched

In the first complete inning he worked, Al Gettel pitched in as many runs as Calvert did in six. The Bengals ganged up on the ex-Chisox righthander for three runs in the seventh, but they didn't need them the way Gray was pitching.

He gave up three hits in the first two innings and then retired 19 in a row before Sam Mele broke up the spell with a pinch-hit double, of which nothing came, in the eighth. Eddie Yost's triple and Eddie Robinson's fly brought in the last Nats run in the ninth.

Kozar gave the cozy gathering of 7256 something to cheer about when he smacked Gray's second pitch of the game to the right center pocket and slid under a throw at the plate for his homer, but the cheers soon turned to jeers as the Tigers lashed back at Calvert in the second inning.

Three hits, with Neil Berry's cheesy double, the payoff wallop, brought Calvert a 2-1 deficit and eventually added up to Calvert's seventh straight licking, which makes his record 6-10.

With two away and Tigers on first and second, Berry dropped a fly into short right which fell for a double as two runs scampered in. Robinson's sixth-inning homer made it 3-1 and three hits and three walks, two intentionally, made it 6-1 off Gettel in the seventh.

Johnny Groth bashed in one tally with a double and Johnny Lipon stroked a single with the bases jammed to paddle the other two runs across.

IN SHORT—Hot weather note: It was so warm that League President Will Harridge allowed the base umpires to work without coats, but Plate Umpire Art Passarella had to sweat it out in full regalia . . . The only way for Calvert to win is to pitch a shutout . . . The Nats have given him only five runs in the last 26 innings . . . The Tigers have now whipped the Nats eight straight and have won 11 of the 14 games between the two clubs . . . Tonight the Nats have a chance to lose two more games. They meet up with the Tigers in a twi-night double-header beginning at 6:30 o'clock . . . It's Joe Haynes and Sid Hudson for Washington against Fred Hutchinson and Lou Kretlow.

'Gain For Britain'

Locke, Banned in U. S., Plays In Irish Open Golf Today

London, July 26 (AP).—Bobby Locke of South Africa, British Open golf champion, left by plane today for Belfast to compete in the Irish Open golf championship starting tomorrow.

Locke decided to go to Ireland when the U. S. Pro Golf Association barred him yesterday from competing in tournaments it sponsors.

Locke was accused of failing to keep playing dates in America.

Commenting on the ban, the London Star said:

"There is no doubt that America's loss in banning Bobby Locke from PGA tourna

Oceanport, N. J., July 26 (AP).—A rare mistake made by Starter Bill Schamehorn at Monmouth Park today resulted in a refund of $12,566 to backers of a juvenile filly in the fifth event.

Likarock, owned by Emma Downs, was not placed in position for the start with seven other young platers and the starter did not notice her in the rear of the gate. He thus sent the seven others away without the filly.

Nick Bloom and Sir Sag, running as an entry, accounted for first and third positions in the dash, with Blazing separating the pair. Nick Bloom, covering 5½ furlongs in 1:06 2/5 paid $7.60 to his backers in the crowd of 12,518.

Schamehorn, following the race, stated that, while there were eight horses in the lineup, they represented only seven interests, with the result that he dispatched the field after checking seven horses into the stall partition.

Root, Kratz Ride 2 Winners Each

Cumberland, Md., July 26 (AP).—Skydue won his second race at the Cumberland meeting today by copping the sixth and feature event.

Apprentice Johnny Regalbuto rode Skydue in ahead of Dr. Johnson.

Jockeys Buddy Root and Freddie Kratz grabbed the day's riding honors by booting in two winners apiece.

Betting on the eight races totaled $223,820.

The stewards announced that Jockey Mike Mafale had been suspended for the remainder of the meeting. He was set down for striking another jockey with his whip during the eighth race last Friday.

U. S. Junior Golf Opens at Congressional

128 Young Stars Enter 4-Day Event

By West McLean
Post Reporter

The golf stars of tomorrow, 128 strong, tee off today in the second annual USGA junior championship at Congressional Country Club. The field of junior golfers, all under 18 years of age, will be cut in half after the first round of 18 holes today.

The second and third round matches will be held tomorrow with two more rounds scheduled for both Friday and Saturday. The finals will be held Saturday afternoon.

Lind Can't Compete

Because of the age limit, Dean Lind, Rockford, Ill., youngster who won the inaugural event last year will not defend his title. In fact the age limit bars all but two of the quarterfinalists of last year, Mason Rudolph, Clarkesville, Tenn. and Miles Schlapik, Chicago, are the only repeaters.

Washington's nine entries get somewhat of a bad break with the Washington medalist, Dennis Bolster, meeting Billy Livingston, another District entry in the first round. Another Washington lad, Bob Salamy, comes up against Rudolph in the first round. Two other local entries, Billy Wolfe and John Eisinger will meet in the second round if they both pass their first round tests.

The other local entries, Frank McCoy of Baltimore; Hugh Reed Kay Fletcher, and Billy Mall, all of Washington, can't meet until later in the tournament if they survive.

Regatta Plans Are Changed

By Happy Walker

Several innovations to be included in this year's President's Cup Regatta Association events were announced yesterday at the monthly luncheon meeting of the association held at the Willard Hotel.

The coronation will also include a receipt for members of the Pan American Union, members of the President's Cup Regatta Association and the various committee members.

Ben Treadwell, reviewing committee chairman, revealed that there will be 200 sections for six persons available, doubling last year's seating capacity.

Jack Blank, chairman of the Trophy committee, was elected to the board of directors. Blank reported that he will attend the Harmsworth Trophy Event in Detroit this weekend to interview all contestants and urge them to participate in the President's Cup

In three rounds of competition the first ranking junior in the country has dropped a mere 5 out of 41 games.

In the boys' division, Washington's Tommy Bradford lost a close third round match to Al Kuhn of Evanston, Ill., 6—2, 6—4.

The other boys' entry from Washington, Harvey Jackson, bowed to second seeded Don Thompson of Jackson Heights, N. Y., 6—0, 6—1.

Bogley's partner in the doubles events, Dick Squires of Bronxville, N. Y., edged out Alan Schwartz, Chicago, 6—3, 6—4.

The Bogley-Squires combination was the runner-up in the District of Columbia Men's tournament July 10 when they took the top-seeded duet to five sets.

Jack Frost of Monterey, Calif., came through the third round with a quick 6—2, 6—0 win over David Harum of Coral Gables, Fla.

Mrs. Frost Wins Class A Golf Tourney

By Leila Edwards

Mrs. Norman Frost of Columbia Country Club yesterday won the Women's District Golf Association Class A tournament for the Times Herald Cup with an 84—13—71 score.

Mrs. Frost, who recently returned to local play, was off to a slow start on the woods nine at Manor Country Club, shooting a 45 to go out, but a 39, one over women's regular figures, on the long home side aided her in winning the trophy.

A tie for the low gross honors ensued when Mrs. Hugh Nicolson, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. George E. Bailey, jr., Washington, reported identical scores of 81. A playoff was averted when Mrs. Bailey chose to waive the low gross and settle for the third low net prize to which her handicap entitled her.

Mrs. Paul Costello of Indian Spring, shooting an 84—11—73 was awarded the second low net honor, and Mrs. Bailey had an 81—7—74 to place third.

Three players deadlocked for fourth position, Mrs. Charles Egenroad, Washington, 83—7—76; Mrs. Burton Kintz, Prince Georges, 87—11—76, and Mrs. H. E. Davies, Manor, 89—13—76.

Mrs. D. H. Henderson, Congressional, took seventh spot with an 83—6—77, 2 down to par. The last prize went to Mrs. M. H. Dinneen, the third Washington winner, with 86—9—77, 3 down to par.

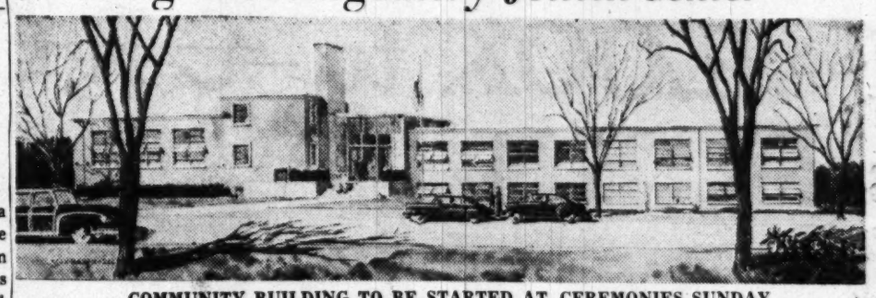
Drawing of Montgomery Jewish Center



COMMUNITY BUILDING TO BE STARTED AT CEREMONIES SUNDAY

A ground breaking ceremony at 3:30 p.m. Sunday will launch construction of the new Montgomery County Jewish Community Center.

The center building, which will cost an estimated $140,000, is located off East-West Highway at Meadowbrook Lane on a 1.5 acre site adjoining Rock Creek Park.

Scheduled for completion in December, the building will be of brick and stone, two stories high, and will include 14 classrooms, two large meeting rooms and game rooms.

Eventually, synagogue and gymnasium facilities will be included in additions. The building was designed by Architects Max Barth, Norman Kertzman, and Leon Julius.

In Sunday's ceremony, Myer Freyman, president of the Montgomery County Jewish Community, Inc., will officiate. Rabbi Henry Tavel of the Office of Chief of Chaplains, U. S. Army, will deliver the invocation.

The center is expected to serve more than 1500 Jewish families in the Montgomery County and Northwest Washington area. More than 400 individual families contributed to the building fund.

Group Votes Survey of GI Training Here

The Washington Trade Schools Association yesterday voted to sponsor a survey among students in its member schools to determine the merits of their GI training programs.

The action was taken as a means of obtaining "factual information" to counter recent charges by the D. C. Apprenticeship Council and the Washington Building Trades Council that the schools were giving inadequate instruction, and were training students in trades for which no jobs are available.

Criticism of the training program resulted July 19 in appointment by the District Commissioners of a 19-member fact-finding committee to investigate the schools' activities.

The questionnaires will be submitted to the students at each school by James A. Pawley, labor economist engaged by the association, who also drew up the questions.

Representatives of the 12 schools also were asked by President Milton Gould to furnish employment records of their graduates to provide an answer to the charge that no jobs are available for the veterans as they complete their training.

Widows, Children Pension Bill Sent To White House

The House yesterday approved and sent to the White House the bill for increasing pensions of widows and children of Washington policemen and firemen.

The bill was cleared by a voice vote at the request of Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.). The bill boosts monthly pensions for widows from $60 to $125; for children from $10 to $25, and boosts from 16 to 18 the top age for paying the children.

It also boosts from 3½ to 5 per cent the contribution by police and firemen toward their retirement.

Takoma Park Woman at 99, Not 'Old' Yet, Goes Canoeing

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

This Friday, Mrs. Abbie Cleaveland, a delicate, alert little Takoma Park, Md., woman, will be one year short of a century of living.

But she doesn't think she's really "old."

"You're never old as long as you're interested in things and people," she said.

At 99, Mrs. Cleaveland is lively proof of that wisdom. She goes to the theater. She votes, attends church, follows music avidly. She even goes canoeing.

The wooden cane she carries is as much for decoration as for support. She gets about her daughter's home at 614 Flower ave. rather nimbly without it.

The daughter, Mrs. Elon G. Salisbury, says her mother wears a hearing aid only for "special occasions," such as DAR meetings, church, or a special visitor. But she manages without it.

Possibly because of her origin—she was born in Marietta, Ohio, in 1850—Mrs. Cleaveland admits to being a "black Republican."

She closely follows political controversy, the Marshall Plan, the atom and other issues. She hears all of Mr. Truman's speeches, but maintains a true Republican reserve toward him.

Dewey, although she voted for him, disappointed her. Senator Robert A. Taft "puzzles me—I think he's too isolationist." She has voted in every election since moving to Takoma Park in 1943.

This week, she went canoeing on the C. & O. Canal with her daughter and son-in-law. The fine cedar-planked canoe in which they paddled was the one in which her late husband, Frank N. Cleaveland, courted her before their marriage in Canton, N. Y. in 1889.

But possibly her chief delight is music. A former piano teacher, she never misses a radio concert.

Her lifetime embraced four wars. In the Civil War, when her father was a regimental commissary officer for the Union forces, Mrs. Cleaveland recalls how she and other Lawrence, Mass., school children pulled linen apart to make surgical dressings.

And in World War II, she put in more than 1200 hours of knitting for the Red Cross.

At times, in fact, Mrs. Cleaveland is so impressed with her own longevity that "I say to myself, why can't one just keep on living forever."

The Federal Diary

New Salary System Offered Congress By Civil Service

A new salary system for Federal workers was recommended to Congress yesterday by the Civil Service Commission.

In brief, the commission suggested that Congress fix the maximum and minimum rates of pay for each grade, and that it be given the authority to set pay rates within those minimums and maximums to meet changing conditions.

Also, the commission said it should be given "adequate coordinating, rule-making, standards and enforcement authority." The commission made its views known to Chairman McClellan of the Senate Expenditures Committee on commenting on the Hoover Commission recommendations on personnel management.

The commission wrote McClellan "that the wide dissimilarity of pay statutes is an obviously undesirable feature of present-day salary and wage administration." However, it opposed the Hoover proposal to set up local wage boards to fix the salaries of postal, clerical and subprofessional workers. "It appears to us," the commission wrote, "that this question has not been thoroughly thought through."

The Hoover Commission recommended an interagency promotion program under which administrators and others would be shifted occasionally to jobs in other agencies. The commission dismissed the suggestion as "an impossible administrative task."

The commission agreed that its efficiency rating system should be simplified. It told McClellan's committee that all of the laws, rules and regulations on efficiency ratings should be abolished.

Instead, it proposed that agencies be given the authority to set up methods to measure the ability and performance of their employes. Also, that the Civil Service Commission should have the power to police the agency systems.

On layoffs, the commission described the Hoover group's revision plans as "too cumbersome to be practicable." The Hoover report urged that when a layoff is to be made that all employes be rated on the basis of ability, past performance, and future potential. The poorest employes would be the first to go.

Civil Service suggested that Congress give it the power to develop a new retention plan which would recognize (1) those with substantial service-connected disabilities (civilian or military) who are fully qualified for continuing work; (2) those with veterans preference without jeopardizing others with much greater claims based on many more years of service, and (3) those with exceptional qualifications who should be retained in order to promote the efficiency of the service."

The commission repeated its opposition to further decentralization of its authority to recruit and examine workers to the individual Federal agencies. But it did acknowledge that its numerical ratings and the appointments by the "rule of three" is "unduly restrictive and hampers proper and sensible selection." In filling middle and higher-bracket jobs, the commission proposed an agency head be given his choice of five eligibles.

JOBS: Civil Service is accepting applications for these new tests: Air Force procurement inspector, $3727 to $4479; vocational rehabilitation adviser, $4479 to $10,305; industrial specialists, $3351 to $6235, and contract negotiator, $3727 to $6235.

NOTES: Margaret A. Reading, a CAF-5 clerk in the office of the Treasury Register, yesterday was given a $100 cash award for a suggestion that will save $3700 annually . . . Six additional employes of the Cleveland postoffice have been suspended on loyalty charges. They will appeal . . . The Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee is now scheduled to meet tomorrow on the postal and classified pay bills. It couldn't round up a quorum yesterday . . . Committee leaders have tentatively decided not to merge the executive pay bill with the employe pay-reclassification measures . . . Pay hearings will continue today before the House Civil Service Committee.

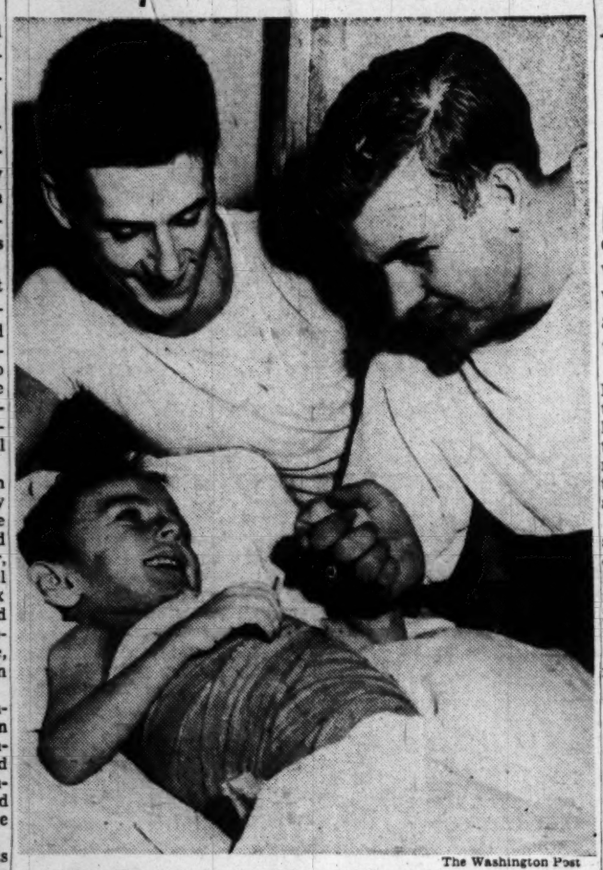
3 GIs to Limp for Giving Skin To Help Mike Rector Recover



The Washington Post

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Three local soldiers will be limping about straddle style today, but prouder of their hurts than a rookie cavalryman.

They are the trio who on Saturday gave the skin lining their inner thighs to soothe the burn pains of plucky Michael Rector. All three are due to leave Casualty Hospital today.

By name, they are Corp. Steven Mercek, 19, a medical corpsman of Walter Reed Hospital; Pvt. Gerald Southard, 20, Pentagon worker, of Fort Myer, Va., and an anonymity-conscious private who gave his name as James F. Dunn, 24, of a Silver Spring, Md., ordnance unit.

Dunn—if that is his name—declined last night to share in any credit for "helping out a game little guy like Mike Rector." Any publicity on himself, he reasoned, would lessen the "personal satisfaction" he says comes with doing things for others.

All said they volunteered to give two four by eight-inch patches of skin each after following the patient's fight for life in newspaper accounts. The six skingrafts were placed on Michael's stomach, back and both thighs to re-cover old skingrafts which had already been absorbed.

The four-year-old patient may need even further grafts from others before his condition will permit self-grafts, his doctor said last night. Skin from others serves only as a protective coating against loss of body fluids. They do not take hold and grow, like one's own skin, but do protect for periods ranging from 30 to 120 days, it was explained.

Michael suffered severe burns over an estimated 70 per cent of his body surface last November 12 while playing with children in a garage near his home. Since then he has amazed his doctors and the public with his stoicism and will to live.

Michael, his doctor said last night, took his eighteenth operation on Saturday without anesthetic and "like a little man." He ate a "full-size" meal 20 minutes later, even to the "pink ice cream" he always asks for after every pain crisis.

Detective Bureau Plan Approved

Sergeants Made Lieutenants Will Continue Doing Investigative Work

The Commissioners yesterday approved a plan which will permit detectives to advance to the rank of lieutenant and still remain in the detective bureau.

The change was suggested by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, who said he was losing some of his best investigators because when they were promoted to lieutenant they were returned to uniform and assigned to a precinct.

The new system makes it possible for Detective Sergts. Richard J. Felber and John K. Baker, both homicide squad aces, to hold the rank of lieutenant and still remain in the detective bureau.

The Commissioners approved their temporary promotion to that rank, effective next Monday.

According to Barrett, the recent death of Lieut. Lewis D. Redman, night inspector at police headquarters, created a vacancy which will be filled by George E. Cooper, now a permanent lieutenant.

To fill another vacancy for a temporary lieutenant, Felber was first in line on the Civil Service register, Baker was next and uniformed Sergt. James L. Rochford was third.

Rochford

Felber

Cooper

Under the old system, the promotion would have gone to Felber, he whould have been returned to uniform and assigned to a precinct.

Under the new system, Felber and Baker are both advanced to lieutenant, but remain in the detective bureau, and the uniformed lieutenancy vacancy goes to Rochford.

In advocating the change, Barrett pointed out that he has lost seven detective sergeants since establishment of the current Civil Service register for promotion on February 11, 1948.

These men, he argued, were highly trained investigators who through the years had created contacts which they could use to best advantage only as detectives.

Won't Cost Much

The new system will not cost much either, Barrett said, pointing out that the difference in salary paid a detective sergeant and a uniformed lieutenant is only $67.72 a year.

The promotion of Cooper to permanent lieutenant made possible the promotions of James K. Hunter to permanent detective sergeant, Olaf J. Schelin to permanent precinct detective, and Richard Flynn as permanent probational detective.

As a result of Rochford's promotion, Corpl. Jesse M. Smith becomes a temporary sergeant and Pvt. Raymond S. Pyles becomes a temporary corporal.

The Commissioners also approved the probationary appointments of the following police privates: Anthony J. Toich, 24; Clement J. Falvey, 29; Irvin G. Decker, 24, and Samuel Rogovsky, 31.

Annexation Action Started By Falls Church in Dispute

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

The running battle between the year-old city of Falls Church and Fairfax County flared on two fronts yesterday, with a setback in sight for Falls Church on at least one.

Falls Church, which became a second class city on August 16, 1948, yesterday began proceedings to annex more than 14 square miles of adjacent Fairfax territory.

At the same time, a Fairfax Circuit Court judge hinted he may rule against the city in its dispute with Fairfax County about jurisdiction over schools.

After a June 3 ruling that Falls Church is a separate school division entitled to operate its own schools, the Fairfax County Board agreed to hand over to the city the Madison Elementary School, with its Jefferson annex.

Holds Title to 2 Schools

The Fairfax School Board refused, however, to relinquish title to the newly built Oak st. Elementary School and the Falls Church High School, arguing that county-wide funds went into construction of the buildings. The city then took the issue back into court.

(The county has 1635 pupils in the three schools now, as compared with 809 pupils from the city of Falls Church, according to Fairfax School Superintendent Irvin Schmitt).

"There is no objection under the law as I understand it for a county to own a school within a city," Judge C. G. Quesenbery stated yesterday, during the hearing.

"If the county can be divested of title (to the schools) there must be some statute which says so," he added.

Judge Quesenbery closed the hearing with the remark that "I don't think the city has brought to my attention any law which would make me change my original opinion. That is probably the way I'll decide the case, but I haven't closed my mind." He said his opinion would be ready in about 10 days.

During the hearing the judge overruled, as "not germane" attempts by Falls Church City Attorney LaRue Van Meter to show that legal aspects of the case "are intertwined with a complex social situation."

Van Meter also maintained: "The (State) constitution places a mandatory duty on the school board and superintendent to operate an efficient school system. This is impossible without a high school and impossible if we have to farm out students."

Van Meter added that such a situation "might even involve criminal liability" on the part of school officials.

Fairfax Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh based his case chiefly on legal precedent in the case of Norfolk County vs. Cox, in which, he said, the court ruled a county could own property within city territory if such were necessary to fulfill required county functions.

Van Meter stated yesterday the city may not accept the Madison School (plus its bonded indebtedness) if refused the other two schools. He said the new State fire code will require such extensive changes in the Madison School and annex that "it is a big question whether it will be good business to take them over" without added advantages of the other two schools.

The school decision, if it goes against Falls Church, will be a blow to the city's annexation proceedings.

One Area School Cited

The annexation suit, approved by the City Council July 11, offers as one of 13 reasons for annexation the fact that only one 6-room school is situated in the area to be annexed, and "all other school facilities are located in and operated by the city."

An adverse decision in the school dispute would force the city to pay tuition for some or all of its pupils in other school jurisdictions, at least until it could acquire schools of its own.

Legal papers for service on the Fairfax County supervisors, first formal move in the annexation proceedings, were turned over yesterday to Fairfax Sheriff John Taylor.

The Fairfax Board of Supervisors announced its opposition to the move, which would strip it of taxable real estate assessed at about 12 million dollars plus three millions dollars of taxable personal property, as long ago as December, 1948.

The suit would more than double the city's present population and would increase its present land area about seven times.

The proposed annexation area depends on the city for most of its water supply now, as well as for supplemental police and fire protection, according to the suit.

Bill for Six New Judges Here Passes

Conference Report Approved by House Is Sent to Senate

The House of Representatives yesterday approved a conference report on a bill creating 27 new judgeships, 6 of them in the District of Columbia.

The bill was sent to the Senate.

Meanwhile, it was learned that a committee of the District Bar Association has submitted to Attorney General Clark the names of lawyers here it feels should have the posts.

Neither the association nor the Justice Department would release the names submitted. However, it was learned that the association's judicial selections committee had declined to nominate any of its own committee members.

Numerous local attorneys are seeking the appointments.

The House bill gives three new judges to the United States Court of Appeals here and another three to the District Court.

The other 21 posts, two of them temporary, are:

One for the Northern and Southern districts of Florida; one for the Northern district of Georgia; one for New Jersey; four for the Southern district of New York; one for Oregon; one temporary for the Western district of Pennsylvania; two each for the Northern and Southern districts of California; one for Kansas, two for the Eastern district of Pennsylvania, and one temporary for the Southern district of Texas.

The bill also would make permanent one temporary jurist's post each in the Western district of Oklahoma, the Northern district of Ohio, and the Eastern and Western districts of Missouri.

Man Shot Dead Day After He Leaves Hospital

A man who the day before had been released from St. Elizabeth's Hospital yesterday finished a discussion of his mental condition with his mother, then went upstairs and shot and killed himself, police said.

William T. Farley, 39, of 621 S st. nw., died about an hour after being taken to Freedmen's Hospital. He had been talking with his mother, Mrs. Anna Farley, police said, when at about 11 a.m. he went to the second floor bathroom and shot himself in the right temple.

Farley, police said, had been released at 4 p.m. Monday from St. Elizabeth's, where he had been under treatment for a mental condition. Homicide squad detectives are still investigating the death.

4 Spotted Fever Cases in Fairfax

Fairfax County yesterday reported its fourth—and the Washington area's eighteenth—case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever of the year.

County health officials said the victim was a 21-year-old man who lives near Vienna. He was taken to Arlington Hospital.

Senate Votes For 2 D. C. Youth Court Judgeships

Juvenile Measure Is Sent to House; Teacher Salary Program Snagged

The Senate voted last night to give the District two permanent Juvenile Court judges. There is now one permanent judge.

Senate action sent the bill to the House. The juvenile court bill was one of five District measures cleared by the Senate during a night call of its unanimous-consent calendar.

But a cross-up in Senate signals blocked a teacher salary bill snagged last year in an unusual legislative tangle, and placed a second bill in a new, similar tangle.

The teacher salary bill was passed by both Houses in identical form last year and still did not become a law. The reason was that each House passed its own bill; neither found time in the closing rush to accept the bill of the other House—the final step needed to forward it to the White House.

Blocked in Senate

The bill this year cleared the House, and the Senate District Committee, but was blocked last night. District Committee aides on the floor identified the opponent as Senator Burnet Maybank (D., S. C.), but he told reporters he had not objected to the measure and later took the floor to tell the Senate the same thing. The official record showed "several Senators" objecting, but only one voice was heard and its owner was not identified.

The measure is aimed at putting some 140 veteran District school teachers with masters' degrees on a salary par with newly-hired masters' degree teachers under the salary law of 1947.

A similar tangle arose around a bill to increase from $600 to $1000 the maximum court allowance from a deceased person's estate to pay his funeral expenses.

The Senate passed a similar bill April 12. The House District Committee took up its own bill, sent it to the House, which passed that measure June 13. To save time, the Senate District Committee then approved the House measure, and sent it to the Senate.

Langer Blocks $1000 Figure

When he heard about the House bill, Senator William Langer (R., N. D.) protested that $600 is "enough for anybody's funeral," and his objection blocked the bill.

The Senate approved a measure which increases from $2 to $5 the annual registration fee required of licensed podiatrists. The bill now goes to the House.

Te Senate approved and sent to the White House a bill revising the law governing the amounts the District must hold back in construction contracts payments as a performance guarantee. Under the new bill, when projects are 50 per cent or more completed, the District can make further payments in full, without holding back the percentage now required.

Other Bills Approved

Also approved were bills to:

1. Transfer from the istrict budget to that of the Administrative Office of United States Courts the budgets of the Register of Wills, the Probation Officer, and the Mental Health Commission here. The bill now goes to the White House.

2. Authorize appointment of a deputy disbursing officer and assistant disbursing officers for the District. It goes to the House.

3. Prohibit sale in the District of rockfish weighing more than 15 pounds, to safeguard the larger fish for spawning. This bill also goes to the House.

Two other measures were held up. One would enlarge the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and broaden its powers. The other would let District insurance companies invest in securities of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Dulles, Native Son, Assigned To D. C. Group

Voteless Washington yesterday placed a native son on the Senate District Committee.

Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), assigned to replace Senator Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kan.) in the District group, was born at 1405 I st. nw., Washington, the home of his grandfather, John W. Foster, February 25, 1888. His grandfather was Secretary of State under President Harrison.

Dulles said he had no present acquaintance with District problems, and would not comment on local issues before he has studied them further in the committee.

There was one exception. The Senator was asked about the bill to liquidate starlings, pending in the Senate District Committee. He said he was for it. He declared he likes birds, but does not feel the starlings were a good importation from Europe.

"We can get along without them," he said.

Dulles also was assigned to serve with the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee, replacing Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.).

Israel Stay Expatriates U. S. Citizen

Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court yesterday dismissed a suit filed by an Israel resident asking for a judicial declaration that he is still a naturalized American citizen.

The action was brought by Morris Mendelsohn of Reenana, Israel, who said he felt he was still an American despite a 12-year stay in the Holy Land. Mendelsohn, who was born in Poland, became an American in 1923 when his father was naturalized.

He was contesting the law which limits stays abroad of naturalized Americans to a five-year period.

Mendelsohn said that the reason he could not come to this country was that he was unable financially to bring over his wife and family and for a period his wife had been seriously ill.

Judge Holtzoff agreed with Assistant United States Attorney Ross O'Donoghue that Mendelsohn by his actions had expatriated himself.

Vice Squad Arrest of Suspect In Numbers Case Held Invalid

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A man who police said admitted that he was carrying numbers slips to "turn them in" was freed yesterday after the United States Attorney's office ruled the arrest to be invalid.

The prosecutor refused to press prosecution of the defendant, Theodore Roosevelt Meekins, 45, of 814 Florida ave. nw.

Police said that at about 2 p.m. Monday vice squad detectives stopped Meekins in the 500 block of Florida ave. nw. He was carrying a large bundle and was asked what it contained.

"Why, numbers, slips and money," police quoted Meekins. "I was on my way to turn them in."

Meekins was quickly charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

In Municipal Court yesterday, United States Attorney George Morris Fay said that he did not believe the case would stand up in court.

Police should have used the information they had previously obtained as to Meekins' business to get a warrant before they stopped him, Fay said. The officers, however, did not have sufficient evidence that a crime was being committed to justify an arrest on the spot, the prosecutor said.

Police With Warrant Nab Lottery Suspect

Thomas Peele, jr., 37, of 1912 Temperance ct. nw., was arrested yesterday by vice squad detectives and charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

Police said they already had a warrant when they arrested Peele in a fish market at 706 O st. nw., and recovered marked money and numbers slips. Peele was held under $1500 bond for commissioner's hearing today.

Two Bandits Caught After Office Holdup

Three men held up and robbed a Western Union office, at 1728 Connecticut ave. nw., of more than $300 last night and police captured two of the bandits within five minutes.

Richard M. Lawson, night manager of the office, told police three white men, all about 30, entered the office at about 10:30 p. m.

One of the men told Lawson he wanted to send a telegram. When Lawson walked up to the counter, one of the men commanded, "Give me all your money." One of his companions thrust a .38 caliber revolver in Lawson's direction.

The gunman walked around the counter and accepted $12 that Lawson handed him from a drawer. Then he made Lawson kneel on the floor and open the office safe which contained $300.

The men then fled from the office, ran north on Connecticut ave., then east on S st.

Two of the men were captured five minutes later by Pvt. J. J. Bobinger and Corp. Michael McCarthy of the Police Accident Investigation Unit near Sheridan Circle, at 23rd st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Police said the man with the gun was one of those caught and that the holdup money had been recovered.

No Litter for Katy, Owner Pays Board

Katy, the Boxer, ate heartily and surely was frisky enough, but love failed to come her way.

It was this dog days' story that led to a Municipal Court suit settled yesterday for the sum of $18.60.

According to the suit, Katy was sent out to Leroy R. Henry, 1005 E st. se., to be kennelled by her owner, the late Dewey M. Foley, 2515 13th st. nw. The agreement, according to the suit, was that Foley would give Henry half the next litter Katy had.

While at the Henry establishment, Katy ate $18.60 of Henry's food and chewed up a pair of rubbers, a handbag, a silk blouse and a pair of false teeth, the suit states. Henry sent her back to Foley, it was charged.

There was no litter, and Henry sued for his expenses while Katy had cavorted at his place. Foley counterclaimed that the lack of litter was Henry's fault.

But, before trial, the attorneys agreed to the settlement, which just covers the food Katy consumed and not the rest of the damage.

Commerce Aide Suicide By Gas Fume

A 32-year-old Commerce Department map maker committed suicide yesterday in Alexandria by breathing carbon monoxide fumes.

Police identified the victim as Roy Keith Mellor of 3 Clifford ave., Alexandria. Dr. John A. Sims, city coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Mellor's body was found just before noon slumped in the front seat of his car which was parked in the driveway of a large property known as the Hume Estate near Mount Vernon and Commonwealth aves. Police said a hose had been taped to the exhaust and passed through the left front window of the car.

Police said they found a note addressed to his wife which indicated suicide. No motive was found, police said, however, other than a statement from Mellor's wife that they had quarreled over her taking a job. She reportedly told police her husband had left their house about 3 a. m. yesterday saying he was going fishing.

Mellor leaves his wife, Dixie, and two daughters, Nancy Susan, 3, and Paula, 2.

Married to Fine Man After Short Courtship, Bride Is Secretly Nostalgic for First Beau Who Was Her Steady Companion for Five Years

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bride of just six months, and I was brought up to believe that once married, you are married for keeps. Tom, my husband, really is wonderful; and I love him, he is so sweet and good, but after six months of marriage I find I am not satisfied with life.

The trouble is that I can't keep my mind off Ralph, who was my first beau. We grew up together, my family thought the world of him, and we dated steady for five years. Although we were never officially engaged, I did wear his school ring and we often talked of the time when we'd be married.

However, we were of different faiths and try as we would we never could find a solution to this. After several trial attempts to break off, we finally parted for good, agreeing not to communicate in any way. Then I met Tom and we became engaged and got married within a year.

RALPH was at the wedding and as I came down the aisle I caught his eye, and never have I seen such a hurt expression. I didn't see him again until last week, when we met accidentally. Both of us were terribly confused but we talked a few minutes anyway; and now I think only of him.

Tom knows nothing of my mixed feelings and I have been a good wife to him, but I can't give him as much as I should, with Ralph on my mind; and I feel I'm being unfair in that. Sometimes I think if only I could have a long talk with Ralph I would feel better; but I don't know whether he still feels the same as he did 18 months ago.

Is this simply a case of hankering after forbidden fruit? Or does every bride think secretly of her first love? They say the first year of marriage is the hardest; and believe me I am trying to be a good wife. I hope you can give me sound advice; and if I need a good scolding, don't pull your punches. N. N.

DEAR N. N.: Difference in faith never yet has stopped a bachelor from marrying a girl he profoundly wanted to have and to hold, so don t fool yourself that Ralph let you go, or that you quit him, for that alleged "reason."

All men are instinctively reluctant to marry, because they see it as a deal in which they lose freedom and sign for burdens, to pay society's price for certain consolations they hope to gain. And when they do marry it is because they have decided (independently of anybody) that their life is ripe for the big gamble.

Further, the girl they wed, after entering this state of mind, is, generally speaking, somewhat a stranger to their experience, somebody fresh and new, whose principal drawing card is the mystery of her potentials, which enables the suitor to assume that she embodies the qualities of "dream woman" long cherished in his fancy.

YOUR COURT with Ralph died of old age, in the sense that five years' steady dating ruled out mystery, and he wasn't ready to marry anyway, and when his noncooperative attitude on that score became abundantly clear, as a fixed state of mind in relation to you, the break was made. So why don't you bury the corpse?

As for Ralph's hurt glance on your wedding day, don't invest it with deathless significance. It was simply a momentary glimpse of hurt vanity you got, as he took in evidence tending to show that you had rapidly rallied from need of him. And as for his flustered manner when you recently met, it was sparked by your agitation, no doubt, and didn't portray poignant frustration on his part.

You married Tom for anchorage, but with secret hope of jolting Ralph, I gather, and now you'd like a long talk with Ralph to explore his reactions thereto,—but the fact is, Ralph is not for you, and no amount of talk can ever change that, even though Ralph might talk differently now that he's off the hook. For advice, come out of your adolescent daydreams, and give realistic attention to Tom, avoiding "odious comparisons" with the old beau who let you down. M. H.

Fried chicken—both plain and de luxe—was a prize winner in the recent chicken-cooking contest at Salisbury, Md. See recipe for the de luxe variety in Lucia Brown's column

3 Prize Winning Recipes For Chicken to Delight Guests and Chefs Alike

By Lucia Brown

COOKING MEAT so that it's a summertime treat is an art beloved by outdoor and indoor cooks alike and one that's gotten considerable attention from several groups in this area lately.

Over on Maryland's Eastern Shore, they staged a chicken-fixing contest the other day, with 142 cooks in action. The skillet bee was held at Salisbury, lasted 5 hours, and was sponsored by the Poultry and Egg National Board and the Delmarva Chicken Festival.

First prize was awarded for a broiled chicken doused in butter, lemon juice and sugar. Plain fried chicken got second honors, chicken pot-roasted in wine came in third, and a de luxe fried chicken was fourth. Incidentally, Mrs. Rowena Carpenter of Washington and the Department of Agriculture was one of the judges. Here are two of the winning recipes:

DELMARVALOUS BROILED CHICKEN
(1st Prize: Mrs. A. L. Warlik, Salisbury, Md.)

- 1 plump chicken, not over 2½ pounds, dressed
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- Melted butter or margarine
- Granulated sugar
- 1 lemon

Select plump young chicken, 8 to 12 weeks old, weighing not over 2½ pounds dressed. Split in half, clean thoroughly, and wipe as dry as possible. (Breaking joint and removing wing tips make chicken easier to manage on plate.)

Rub entire surface with cut lemon, occasionally squeezing lemon slightly to obtain plenty of juice. Sprinkle with mixture of approximately 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon black pepper and ½ teaspoon paprika, depending on size of chicken. Coat well with melted butter or margarine, and sprinkle lightly, but completely, with sugar.

Lay chicken on broiler pan (not rack) skin side down and flatten as much as possible, then place in broiler as far from heat as possible for approximately 10 minutes, to allow seasonings to penetrate chicken. At the end of this time, the chicken will begin to brown slightly. Therefore, it may be raised somewhat to within 4 inches of heat. It should be broiled slowly, turned occasionally, and basted to insure even browning. A two-pound chicken, dressed weight, will need about 35 minutes to cook evenly and is done when meat on thickest part of the drumstick cuts easily and there is no pink color visible at the bone.

DE LUXE FRIED CHICKEN
(4th Prize: Mrs. Crerar Bennett, jr., Milford, Del.)

Cut into serving pieces one 3 to 3½-pound fryer. Wash thoroughly and drain. Reserve back and giblets for soup. Place a scant cup of vegetable shortening in a large frying pan and heat while rolling chicken in mixture of ¼ cup all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt. Sprinkle with pepper. Brown well; remove chicken and allow to drain in paper towels while preparing batter given below. Reserve drippings for gravy.

BATTER

Turn on oven at 350 degrees. In medium bowl, sift together 1½ cups all-purpose flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, and 1 teaspoon salt. In second bowl, beat with rotary beater until very light, 4 eggs, 1½ cups milk, 3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine.

Slowly blend egg mixture into dry ingredients. When blended, beat with rotary beater just until batter is smooth. Pour into baking dish 10 by 10 by 2 inches. Arrange browned chicken on top of batter. Sprinkle with black pepper. Bake one hour or until batter is puffed and golden brown. Serve at once. Make gravy as follows:

Add 2 cups water to approximately 2½ tablespoons fat left in the drippings. Bring to boil; add thickening made by mixing ½ cup water, 3 tablespoons flour. Stir constantly while adding thickening and simmer 3 or 4 minutes. Sprinkle in pepper.

Father of the Bride

'It's Everybody's Wedding Day But Mine,' Wails Kay—and 'Pops' Agrees With Her

This is the eleventh of 14 installments of that popular saga of the forgotten man, "Father of the Bride." This condensed version of Edward Streeter's novel chronicles the story of Mr. Stanley Banks as he watches the rise of the greatest show on earth (his daughter's wedding) and the fall of his bank account.

By Edward Streeter

Illustrated by Gluyas Williams

MR. BANKS awoke early the following morning, conscious that many things were wrong. The first to register positively was his body, which felt as if it had been run over. Then his slowly awakening mind grasped the fact that he had come home rather late from the Country Club and that in a few hours his oldest child was going to be married.

Instinctively he turned to look out the window. The sun was shining. A cool breeze stirred the leaves of the maple tree outside. His eyes traveled lower and encountered those of the mother of the bride. They were appraising him with an expression that struck him as being on the cold side.

"Nice day," he said.

"Yes," she said, "thank God. And now we're getting up. There's work to be done."

DOWNSTAIRS the house was unrecognizable. The furniture had disappeared. The whole place smelled, not too faintly, of floor wax and soap suds. A truck pulled into the driveway followed by a black sedan from which a bald-headed man alighted. The front door was open. The bald-headed man walked in without ceremony. "I'm Tim's man," he said.

"Oh," said Mr. Banks,

"I guess we'll be settin' up th' flowers an' stuff," said Tim's man.

A few minutes later the floor of the living room was covered with potted plants, ferns and lumps of damp earth.

THE PHONE was ringing continuously. He took charge of it. Anything was better than making conversation. The phone at least demanded concrete answers. Uncle Joe was in town and wanted detailed instructions on how to get out to Fairview Manor. Aunt Harriet had lost her suitcase with her best dress in it. Would someone look around the house and see if she had left it there by any chance?

The bald-headed man walked in without ceremony

Mr. Banks said he would find it for her and tiptoed up the back stairs. But he was not looking for Aunt Harriet's suitcase. He was looking for Kay. He had suddenly noticed that she was not around.

Kay was lying on the bed, her face buried in the pillow, her shoulders shaking.

"Kitten," he said, "what's the trouble?"

"Tell me about it. What's hurt you? You shouldn't cry today, Kitten. This is your wedding day."

"Oh, I know it, Pops. That's just the trouble. It's my wedding day, but it isn't. It's everybody else's wedding day but it just isn't mine." She let her face down into the pillow again, but now she was quieter.

Mr. Banks rubbed her back for a few minutes without answering. "I know," he said finally. "I know. Mine either."

THE BILL HARCOURTS gave a luncheon before the wedding. It was to have been a small affair: just the bride and groom, the bridal party and the immediate family. Nothing about this wedding, however, seemed capable of remaining small.

The place was alive with relatives whose names Mr. Banks could not remember.

Athletic young men kept coming up with plates heaped to the gunwales with lobster and chicken salad, to which buttered rolls clung precariously. Mr. Banks felt slightly bilious and compromised on a cup of soup and a highball.

Kay approached them. "Mother's looking for you. She thinks we'd better be getting home." He gazed at her with awe. An hour ago she had been sobbing on her bed. Now she looked radiant—like a goddess of spring—serene and beautiful.

MRS. PULITZSKI, who had made over Mrs. Banks' wedding dress for Kay, had insisted on coming to the house that afternoon to be sure that all was in order.

"Good God," said Mr. Banks to the world at large, "this is a swell time to find out if it fits her. What's the woman going to do? Start making alterations now? Do you people realize it's a quarter to three and that there's a wedding in an hour and 45 minutes?"

Mr. Banks gave up and went to his room to dress. Somehow he felt alone and out of the picture. Mrs. Banks was dressing in the guest room which adjoined Kay's.

A moment later Mrs. Banks entered the room and Mr. Banks forgot everything else. He knew that he would never be able to remember what she was wearing. He knew also that, to his dying day, he would never forget her as she stood, framed in the doorway, waiting for his approval—slim, graceful and lovely. All the beauty of her own wedding day lay upon her, tempered by a serenity and dignity that made Mr. Banks feel suddenly shy.

She saw the startled admiration in his face. "Don't say any more, darling," she said. "You like it. I saw that. You'll spoil it if you try to tell me why. And for heaven's sake don't muss my hair."

"KAY IS READY," announced Mrs. Pulitzski. They filed down the hall after her. She paused before Kay's door and threw it open dramatically. Kay was standing in the middle of the room, her train and veil carefully arranged behind her, no longer a brown-haired girl of 5 feet 4, but a princess from some medieval court. Her head was thrown back slightly and she watched the effect upon her courtiers with the calm assurance of one born to the cloth of gold.

Mr. Banks would not have been surprised if she had extended her hand for him to kiss. His eyes became suddenly blurred. Good God, this would be a hell of a time for him to start crying. What was the matter with everybody today?

"You're wonderful, Kitten. Wonderful."

She squeezed his hand. "Thanks, Pops." For an instant her eyes met his—not as a daughter but as a woman. "Now, on to the slaughter," she said.

THE TWO black limousines drove up at 4:15, their drivers immaculate in whipcord uniforms and visored caps.

"Where the hell—" began Mr. Banks.

The driver of the rear car got out and stood before Mr. Banks, cap in hand. He had white, wavy hair and a pontifical face that radiated gentle loving-kindness.

"I'm sorry, sir," he said. "They gave us the wrong address. I hope it hasn't upset the young lady."

Mr. Banks deflated visibly. "Not at all," he said. He helped Mrs. Banks and her mother into the front car. Mrs. Pulitzski already had Kay carefully folded into the rear one. He climbed in beside his daughter.

"Drive," said Mr. Banks to the saintly wheelsman, "as if the seven hounds of hell were on your tail."

Father Was Late . . . But Mother Almost Missed the Wedding

By William Kerlin

Even in a December wedding there can be troubles, according to William J. Kerlin of Chevy Chase, Md. But the center of the commotion was not daughter Patricia, but Mrs. Kerlin, who practically missed her own daughter's wedding. Patricia is now Mrs. Arthur Howell Cobb, residing in Washington with her bridegroom.

I MARRIED into a family that always gave an individual touch to everything it did, as you will presently see. However, the intention in regard to our daughter's wedding was to follow strictly every rule laid down by Marjorie Binford Woods' "The Bride's Book." I acquiesced in this, since it specified that the father of the bride has nothing to do but give the bride away.

William Kerlin and Daughter Pat

I was calmly awaiting that moment when a peremptory demand was made that I find my wife's missing long kid gloves. Two pairs—one white, one beige—had been left by her grandmother for just such an occasion.

Well, I started on my search. The house was full of bridesmaids, preening themselves in hoop skirts made of net. I dodged around doors and searched in bureaus amid a medley of feminine shrieks. Finally the long white gloves were located and the exodus from the house began.

The bride and I descended to the garage where a sheet was spread to protect her finery. We entered the car, drove up the driveway and at last I was on my way to fulfill my one appointed task. We were half a square away when the air was rent by cries from a woman apparently in distress . . . no, a woman in a towering rage. We looked back. There on the snowy road stood a lovely feminine figure in a long fuchsia gown, with beige gloves, wildly gesticulating.

Could it be? Yes it was. "Why, that's Mother!" cried the bride.

We drove to the corner and turned back. Shaking with vexation, she managed to stammer that at the last minute the white gloves had disappeared again.

Mother couldn't ride with us to church, of course, since the Bride's Book says the bride rides in a motor car (or carriage) alone with her Father.

So father descended from the car, arranged the sheet, and the bride stepped out. The bride and her father stood on the sheet in the open garage while the chauffeur drove Mother in solemn grandeur to the church.

When the bride's mother stalked to her seat, escorted by a broadly smiling usher, a relative whispered, "What in the world was the matter?"

No one within view will ever forget the sense of outrage that showed in Mother's face when she said, "They went off and left me."

About Wall Settling

The side wall of my brick home has developed a large crack from the ceiling halfway down the front wall due to settling of the building. Before plastering and painting I want to be reasonably certain the settling has ceased. Have you any ideas on this? L. L.

A simple way to determine whether the settling has ceased is to lightly mark the end of the crack with a pencil. If the crack does not extend beyond the mark in a month's time, you can safely assume the settling has ceased. Most settling in a new home will have ceased by the end of several months to a year. If plaster cracks continue to appear after after that time, the foundation supports of the house are possibly not correctly placed and it would be wise to discuss the problem with a construction engineer.

Can you tell me how to prevent mildew in upholstered furniture, mattresses, Hollywood bed springs, etc., and also how to destroy the musty odor from mildew that has already started? Have heard tobacco will absorb the odor if sprinkled under cushions, etc., or am I mistaken? I believe using a de-humidifier will prevent further mildew, but what about the odor that is already in my furniture? D. G. H.

Because musty odor in upholstery and mattresses is caused by the absorption of dampness from the air, it can usually be improved by exposing the upholstery cushions and mattresses to the sun. Another way to get rid of it is to spray the pieces with paradichlorobenzene, which is a deodorizer as well as a moth preventive. A dehumidifier in the room will help prevent future mildew and also remove the musty odor because when it dries the air it will remove moisture from the upholstery. Of course, if the odor in the upholstery is caused by soil, it must be cleaned before the odor will be gone.

The moth preventive would be safer to use under cushions than tobacco, because if the tobacco becomes moist it could stain the upholstery fabric badly.

I am planning a baby shower, the recipient of which is badly in need of necessities. I want to ask the guests either to donate money or to tell them specifically what to bring. I expect to ask all the neighbors in our court. How do I word the invitation and what do you suggest I serve? B. D. S.

It seems to me that the nicest, least embarrassing way to handle this would be to write notes or telephone each of the guests inviting them to a layette shower. In the invitation you might add that you are hoping the gifts presented to the mother-to-be will comprise a complete layette. If the guest should then ask what is needed to complete the layette, have in mind suggestions for gift items in various price ranges. You and the guests whom you know intimately may get together and buy the essentials such as diapers, shirts, nightgowns, etc. With the essentials taken care of, the other gifts are certain to make a very complete layette.

For refreshments you could serve a cool fruit salad, dainty sandwiches and a cool drink. Or, ice cream topped with fresh fruit and served with cookies and a drink would be refreshing.

Several of our tablecloths are of rayon, some colorfully handblocked. Stains have appeared, probably from tea or cream. Can you advise me how to remove "general usage" spots without harming the cream colored backgrounds or the bright prints? W. S.

If these cloths have withstood regular washing without fading, the spots can probably be removed without harming the colors in designs or background by adding a little household bleach to the washwater. Use one cup of bleach to a regular sized washerful of suds. Rinse three times in clear water.

In future, to remove tea or cream stains allow the cloths to soak in cold water for several hours before washing in hot suds.

'It Ain't What You Do—'

After the Dieting's Over, It Is Easy to Take Advice On Exercise Lying Down

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE IMPORTANT thing, besides DOING exercises, is your posture when you do them, said Ida Jean Kain, as we continued our exercise and interview. "If you take a wrong posture with a wrong line-up—hips out, for instance, they're no good. You've got to be on the beam, then work your muscles from the right position—that's why we give beginners exercises lying down.'

The word "lying down" rang a bell. "Lying down," I echoed, "my clients seem only to be interested in that. Is it really worth-while?"

"Of course you can do exercises in bed, provided the mattress doesn't 'give' too much. The new kind give a good deal of support. With beginners, I'm all for it . . . You can go at it leisurely. Start with stretching, pulling through the middle—arms overhead. But you have to remember what you're trying to slim—if your waist needs slimming add a twist, then follow up with a double twist.

Exercises in Bed

"TIME OUT—these are the maneuvers I find least boring—here's how the IJK diagram says to do them:

"No. 2—Then bend both knees, keep thighs together and twisting firmly at the waist section, touch thighs to bed at floor side, then, using waist as pivot, touch thighs at the opposite side.

"You can take wonderful chin exercises in bed," she added for no particular reason, since my chin is my strong point. "Toss away the pillows. Lift your head from the bed without letting the chin tip down," here Miss K. slid gracefully prone.

"That puts all the work on those bracing muscles in front. Start with this three times night and morning and, when you wash your face splash cold water over the chin. The essence of a beautiful throat line is to keep pulling up the line at the back of the neck. If you do—a double chin hasn't a chance. You can't have a dowager's hump either, if you do this."

"Well, I have a pronounced dowager's hump," I interjected, "it's an avocational hump, though—from typing." "You can counteract it with exercise," the muscle know-it-all replied. "Do the exercise in reverse. Lie on your stomach, lift your head from the bed, pulling back your arms as though you were swimming."

What About the Spread?

"WELL, now that you've sliced off the hump, what about the spread? I mean the middle-age spread? A few of my clients are in a constant state of dither about it."

"That's a misnomer," Ida Jean encouraged, "there isn't any such thing. You can acquire a spread at any age or you can skip it. You can live to 100 and never get the spread, provided you use your muscles right. The worst thing about it is what it does to your spirits—you're absolutely dated, you can't wear gay clothes, it makes you self-conscious on the beach. If you slump when you sit and slouch when you walk, you're practicing bad posture all your life and any eight minutes of daily exercise won't help.

"Well, now we've tossed off chins and humps—and other signs of senile deterioration you can banish?"

"Yes, Ma'am, did you read my column yesterday about the flabby upper arm?"

"I keep mine so beautifully chiselled (or should it be shaped?) by stretching them way out and waving them in very tiny circles," I said, then added hastily, "when I think of it."

"You couldn't be righter but there's an arm exercise your lazy friends can do in bed." Since arms are ONE thing I don't have to bother about—I ignored her come-on.

It's How You Do It

WE BROKE up the discussion for a few moments while I exhibited one of my snappier exercises—lying flat on the floor, putting feet under a chair rung and sitting up without help—then leaning back and NEARLY touching the floor, then up again. "I can do this 50 times without stopping," I said truthfully.

"I just can't see why you have an ounce of fat on your abdomen," puzzled Miss Kain. Then she gave a delighted scream.

You guessed it, I was doing it all wrong! Using my back muscles instead of my stomach muscles! "Well," anyway, I consoled myself, "I must have an awfully strong back."

Miss Kain quickly revamped all my athletic efforts. Now I've learned, or think I've learned, to p-u-l-l in the right places.

"Old time toe touching is out—it's just a showoff. But if you put in a twist, stoop without bending knee, twist your right hand down over to touch your left toe—then you have it!"

"I have it!" I giggled.

La Kain Slips

"EXERCISE is NOT reducing," the otherwise smiling Kain continued sternly, "It will help you lose inches and have a trimmer figure, but if you exercise and keep eating up to capacity you wont lose weight. A toned muscle is much more compact, hugs the figure; a lax muscle takes up more space by bulging.

There are lots of people—she glanced my way—"who look too heavy when they aren't—its laziness, or a fascinating word called velleity—which means inertia."

"How do you spell that word?" I asked utterly captivated. Obviously, at long last I had Ida Jean where I wanted her.

"I think it's v-e-l-l-i-t-y," she answered slowly. On thin pretext I nipped out of the room, hastily consulted my trusty dictionary. "I think you meant v-e-l-l-E-i-t-y." I said with cool composure. "And, by the way, it means, 'Wishful state or inert aspiration'."

"That's right, that's you!"

Later in the day, though, Ida Jean telephoned. In a more mollified voice she congratulated me on losing EIGHT pounds in 12 days—told me not to lose more than five this coming month. "It'll show in your face."

As she hung up, I shouted, "Goody!"

Eat to Beat the Heat . . .

This Reducer Lost 24 Pounds in 6 Months

By Ida Jean Kain

IF SUMMER slimming isn't a breeze for you, and the pounds haven't melted off as promised, and you're tempted to go back to the old ways of overeating, with a vengeance . . . here is a report from someone who has been through it all.

"I had a good figure when I was a bride, 5 feet 6, 22 streamlined pounds. But time, motherhood and the temptation to relax and indulge myself in all fattening foods, changed me from a slim sylph to Somebody's Mother . . . 154 pounds.

"When I started the diet—meat, yellow vegetables, green vegetables, boiled eggs, orange juice, fruit, milk, a vitamin concentrate and that's all— I suffered torment without my hot rolls, potato salad and all the fancy fixings. It was even worse than I thought it would be! But tell your reducers they really can lick their appetite in just three days. The stomach really does get smaller. To my amazement, I found I was perfectly satisfied.

IDA JEAN KAIN

"The next stumbling block was water retention—I was NOT losing much weight. Then I came upon your column on water retention, explaining that lost fat and stored water weigh the same. You promised this would adjust within 16 days and, magically, it did. Believe me, your daily morale builders helped three-fourths . . . even more than my strong wil power. Give credit where credit is due, is my motto.

"The happy ending is that six months ago I weighed 154 pounds . . . and yesterday, 130 pounds

Both Parent and Child Benefit

Zestful Approach Makes Learning Fun

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IT IS the fortunate parent who can make profit out of situations which many a parent considers to be work alone.

Instead of being bored by questions she is called upon to answer, or expeditions she takes with her children, she is fascinated by the information she acquires.

Mrs. F. G. Writes, "I am wondering, Mrs. Eldred, if you have ever advised mothers of the advantages of riding with the current? I had no brothers and at the age of 40 I find myself with two boys who are leading me an interesting and exciting life.

"I got my first feeling of relaxation with them when I took them to the zoo in our city. One of the boys pointed out to me the sparrows feeding in the elephant's cage.

"I know that it is right to expose our children to the best influences, but I have little patience with the mother who says, behind her hand, 'I am just doing this for so and so's sake.'

"Every activity I have shared with the boys has brought me information, if it be a trip to the woods, or a test in the fourth-grade, social studies.

"It seems important to me to learn with my children. The day is past when parents were the font of knowledge for them. We have to acknowledge our shortcomings and compensate for them. Incidentally, I am a college graduate and my fourth-grade son is teaching me to spell. Can't you put this across to your readers?"

I am letting you do it for me. This is a fine policy and when mothers have to help their children with their homework it should not be done with a bored air as if the whole thing were so uninteresting to them.

As for expeditions, there is more than information to be gleaned from them; there are relationships to be cultivated and polished between a mother and her sons. Time wasted? By no means. This is of the very essence of parenthood."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 26 (AP).—Grain futures dipped sharply today after yesterday's upward movement.

Wheat and corn were off more than 3 cents a bushel at times and oats more than a cent.

The Government report, showing record carryovers of corn and oats, and also heavy stocks of wheat, was a principal factor in selling which continued through most of the session.

A slackening in the heavy flour buying of Monday and last Saturday, and rains beneficial to spring wheat in the Northwest and corn in Iowa, also contributed to the downturn.

Wheat closed off 1¾ to 2⅞ cents from the previous finish, corn was down 2¼ to 3, oats were off 1¼ to 1¾, rye was 4½ to 5¼ lower, and lard fell 3 to 18 cents. Soybeans started slightly higher, with December and March then slipped lower with other grains and closed down 1 to 2½ cents.

U. S. Press Hailed As Best by Graham

Philip Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, told members of the Bethesda Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon meeting yesterday that, in his opinion, the American press was the best in the world, but that there ought to be "continuing pressure for improvement."

Graham pointed out that the press was the only business protected by constitutional guarantee of freedom and there was, therefore, "an overriding moral obligation to use this privilege for the benefit of the community."

2 American Editors Held By Chinese

Shanghai, July 26 (AP).—Workers of the suspended American-owned newspaper, the Shanghai Post and Mercury, today barricaded Editor Randall Gould and negotiator Charles Miner of Takoma Park, Md., in their offices.

Employes are demanding pay through July 15 at the present levels, retroactive to June 15, the day the newspaper closed. The workers charge the newspaper suspended operation without official permission. The Communist labor board agreed with the workers, ordered the wgees paid, and told the newspaper it would consider idts closure request.

Miner, representative o f the owner, C. V. Starr of New York, told the workers and labor board that the paper'es funds were exhausted, but the owner would negotiate on severance pay for the employes.

The employes refused to negotiate pay on grounds the newspaper has not been given permission to close.

Foreign observers view the case as a test of whether a foreign owned firm may close in Shanghai, and whether the local government and labor unions can force foreign owners to send money from abroad to pay wages at a plant which is not operating. Actually the only way they can force such financing is by threatening foreign representatives who are in Shanghai.

Foreign managers of other foreign owned firms here have called such payments "nothing but tribute."

Beleagured Editor Is Takoma Park Man

Miner, 41, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Miner of 611 Ethan Allen ave., Takoma Park. At one time he was secretary to Col. E. Brooke Lee, when the latter was speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates.

He was a correspondent of The Washington Post, wrote for the Bethesda Record, and was editor of the Maryland News and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Tribune. He became .editor of the Shanghai Evening Post during the war, when it was published in Chungking.

Land Owner Fights Change In Zoning

Miss Vivian Simpson, attorney for Samuel E. Bogley, last night asked the Montgomery County Council to retain the present commercial zoning of Bogley's property on Georgetown and Greentree rds., Bethesda.

She argued that a former Board of Commissioners had zoned the property—a lot 80 by 200 feet—as commercial last December.

The property in question is near Suburban Hospital and across the street from grounds of the United States Public Health Service. The nearest commercial property is more than a mile away.

Arguing in behalf of the property owners who desire a reversal of the commercial zoning grant John McInerney, attorney, declared the lot is not large enough for a proposed shopping center.

He contended its use as such would decrease property values in the area and destroy its present residential atmosphere.

Wadsworth Bill Seeks to Preserve Georgetown Sites

Representative James W. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.) yesterday introduced a bill to preserve historic buildings in Georgetown.

The bill would define Georgetown as the area bounded on the south ,by the C. & O. Canal, the east by Rock Creek Park, the west by Glover Parkway and the north by Whitehaven Parkway to 35th, south to P st. and west to 37th st.

It would bar razing, altering, or restoration of any building in the Georgetown area which was built before the end of 1850 unless the move was approved by the Fine Arts Commission.

The bill was sent to the House District Committee, of which Representative Wadsworth is a member.

Two Men Charged In $5000 Theft Waive Hearing

Two men charged with the theft of about $5000 in cash from a Silver Spring, Md., store safe on June 20 waived preliminary hearing yesterday in Silver Spring Police Court.

They are Paul Kelley, 25, of Chestnut Ridge, and James Hyson, 23, of Heitmuller Farm, Old Blagensburg rd., both in Silver Spring. They are charged with larceny from the Montgomery Hills Market.

In court yesterday, State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson nolle prossed a charge of receiving stolen property against Kelley's wife, Sadie J. Kelley, 21. He said he would take the charges against the two men directly to Montgomery County Circuit Court.

White House Planners Hold Routine Session

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) said yesterday that the White House renovation commission had transacted only "routine business" in a morning meeting at the White House.

McKellar, chairman of the six-member group, said another meeting will be held Tuesday.

29 Typhoon Dead Listed In Shanghai

Shanghai, July 26 (AP).—Typhoon-lashed Shanghai today was cleaning streets of mud and wreckage left by the worst storm since 1915. The toll: 29 dead, 23 injured, possibly 200,000 homeless.

The typhoon churned in across the East China Sea Sunday, the day after it raked Okinawa. Shanghai was deluged with 3.94 inches of rain in 25 hours. Water up to six feet surged through the streets.

It was believed the typhoon's greatest havoc was in surrounding agricultural areas.

The storm came on top of devastating floods, which already had ruined crops, flooded cities and made hundreds of thousands homeless in China.

The typhoon struck Shanghai after leaving two dead on Okinawa. Sixteen Americans were injured.

The U. S. Army in Tokyo made arrangements to transport relief supplies by plane and ship to Okinawa, 300 miles south of Japan.

Another typhoon moved toward Japan after passing Iwo Jima.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Col. James V. Hunt, whose Washington activities set off the investigation of five-percenters, made recordings of all his telephone conversations with those men in high places whose influence was his asset. These recordings are in Government hands.

Nathan Milstein, the violinist, performed at the Goethe Festival in Aspen, Colo. He told Irving Kolodin, the music critic, that he had played Beethoven's Violin Concerto. "How was it received?" asked the critic. "So well," said Milstein, "that when I finished the audience stood up, I felt embarrassed, because I'm not old—like Paderewsk wasi or Kreisler. But then I thought when Rubinstein played here they didn't stand up—and he's older than I."

Jimmy Dunn, who won an Academy Award for his performance in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," may play the Ralph Bellamy role in a road company in a Eugene O'Neill play, and before the rehearsal began O'Neill approached him on a delicate subject. He had heard a rumor that Dunn, who had foresworn drinking many years earlier, had liked the grape. "I've constituted myself a committee of one to talk to you about drinking," said O'Neill. You're just the right one," said Dunn, reminding the playwright of his own drinking days . . . "You're so right," laughed O'Neill, and the Committee of One retired.

Howard Chandler Christy, the venerable artist was visited by a younger, less important artist who watched Christy at work and then said: "I hear that you've done some commissions for as little as $2500. That's ridiculous. My minimum is twice that, and my average is $7500. Why do you ever paint portraits for so little money?" . . . Christy thought a moment, and then shrugged: "But if I didn't paint —what would I do?"

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray informed Roger Baldwin, of the American Civil Liberties Union, that as a result of the published report listing Baldwin among the "Unemployables" for Army missions in Germany, the records were removed from the Army files. A new security check will be made without prejudice to the unfortunate listing . . . Nick Blair, who operated the Paradise and Carnival nightclubs in New York, bought Palumbo's Clique Club in Philadelphia, in partnership with Arthur Ganger

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Helping Buy the Groceries

Even though we parents may recognize the importance of providing experiences in responsibility for children, it's not an easy thing to find them. When most of us lived on farms or in small towns there were chores galore. Today, milk is delivered at the door; cooking is much simpler; indeed, housekeeping generally doesn't provide the chances for children to help that it once did.

Some parents have found that shopping for groceries can be very useful in this regard. Youngsters enjoy going with Mom or Dad to the store. If it is one of those in which you serve yourself, the junior members of the family can be very helpful in picking out canned and packaged goods that are needed. As they become more experienced, they can even take care of paying the cashier. Nor is it impractical to let them help decide just what is to be bought.

The feeling of doing something important, the learning of such things as quality of goods and their costs and the experience of talking purchases over with parents and with the store clerks are all worthwhile things that can come from such a simple thing as shopping.

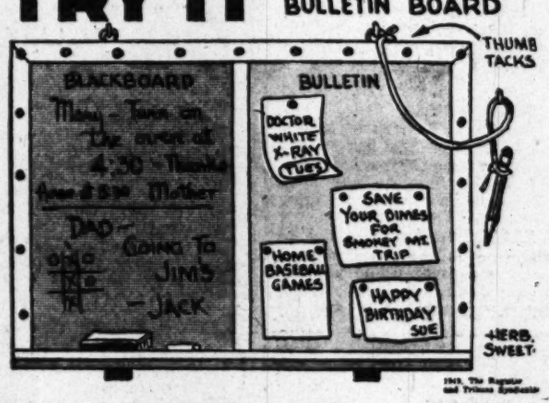
TRY IT — PUT UP A FAMILY BULLETIN BOARD



Do you have a place to put family messages and reminders? The best spot is near the door that is used most by all members of the household. There messages can be hastily scribbled as reminders to all.

The board can be either plain or fancy, depending on its location. On the back porch it might even be a piece of wallboard nailed to the wall, with a scratch pad and pencil to write notes fastened to it. Or if it must be in keeping with a well-groomed room or hall, the wallboard can be framed and painted a blending color.

Colored thumb tacks may be used as a border design.

TRACTOR SALE

Q. Peters left his tractor with Amory, an implement dealer, whereby Amory was to keep it until he sold it for $1000 at a 10 per cent commission. After a couple of weeks Peters changed his mind, deciding not to sell, and wrote Amory to that effect. In the letter he said he would get the tractor when he came to town from his farm in a couple of days. Nevertheless, Amory sold it after getting the letter. Peters insists on getting back the tractor. Amory insists that all Peters is entitled to is $900 (the sale price less the commission). Who is right?

A. Peters made Amory his agent for the sale of the car. A principal has the right to terminate an agency at will unless the agent has the power coupled with an interest (as in the case of a mortgage). So when Peters notified Amory that he didn't want to sell, the actual agency was ended. However, by remaining in possession of the tractor, Amory, an implement dealer, had apparent authority to sell and the innocent purchaser got a good title to the tractor. By wilfully selling after knowing that Peters didn't want to sell, Amory forfeited his right to a commission and for damages for breach of contract. Peters gets $1000.—F. L. D.

I can't see the Invisible Leprechaun's eye, Mr. O'Malley, but I see the cinder—

McSnoyd, what are you doing here? I sent my friend Gus a confidential telegram. . .

Didn't you never hear of wire-tapping, O'Malley? If you got a scheme for making dough, I'm cutting meself in—Hmmph!
Gus.
He could annoy the clams in the daytime, Mr. O'Malley, instead of you. So the cops—
Mmm. Yes. And McSnoyd can be very annoying.
Huh? What's this with the clams?

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

'Baby It's Cold Outside' (But Not in July)

Folks who gripe about the heat
In Washington are silly.
The mercury zooms just as high
In Boston or in Philly.

And as for the humidity:
It's just as damp and gooey
In Memphis, Cleveland, Wichita,
Milwaukee or Saint Looey.

HOUSEHOLDERS BEWARE!

Comdr. H. H. Holton of 2020 S. Quebec st., Arlington, Va., had just finished reading our item about the slick salesmen who pose as "researchers" when two young men appeared at his door.

They were "conducting a survey to see how many veterans were employed in the neighborhood." At least that was the story they started with.

But when Commander Holton asked to see their credentials, their story took a somewhat different turn.

Actually, they were selling magazines — and wouldn't he like to save some money by giving them his subscription?

Commander Holton saved some money by giving them a polite farewell.

I have nothing against magazine salesmen, book salesmen or any other kind. So long as they conduct themselves properly, I'm sure no District Liner would begrudge them an opportunity to make a living.

But I certainly do resent being taken for a sucker. Anybody who wants to sell me magazines had better speak up like a man, and say so.

If he begins by representing himself as a researcher, radio surveyer or some other fancy title, he's going to get a fast invitation to scram.

THAT'S ALL THERE IS

Mrs. Harriet K. Doyle of 1731 Lyman pl. ne. assures me that the following conversation actually took place between Bob Marquette of 1510 19th st. se. and Conrad Beneshan of Framingham, Mass.

The boys were strolling through Franklin Park and stopped before a statue. Noting the name inscribed on the pedestal, Conrad said:

"That's really supposed to say 'John Barrymore.'"

..."How come?" asked Bob. "All I see is 'John Barry.'"

"Exactly," assured Conrad. "There wasn't any room for 'more.'"

JUST CALL ME JUDGE

All of a sudden I'm in great demand as a judge.

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 I'll be judging the kids entered in the bathing beauty contest in the Dupont-Stoddard Community Hall. Tomorrow night it'll be the Mrs. Fairlington contest, sponsored by the Fairlington Civic Association, aboard the S. S. Mt. Vernon (tickets $1.15—advt.). And Friday night it's the semifinals of the Miss Washington contest, at the Naylor Theater.

If I write an item about all these beauties, I hope I remember to start it off: "Well, it looks like things are in pretty good shape."

SNOOZE ITEM

Louise A. Baldwin of 1605 E st. ne. tells me that one evening recently when the mercury reading looked like the war debt, the Baldwins took a drive around the Tidal Basin.

Everybody in town seemed to have gotten the same idea at the same time; whole families were stretched out on the grass, trying to get a little shut-eye amid the gently stirring breezes.

Surveying the scene, Mrs. Baldwin's daughter slyly observed:

"This area is entitled to one of those signs saying 'Washington Slept Here.'"

MAKING BOTH ENDS MEET

The American Woolen Co. has announced price cuts ranging up to 70 cents a yard. This should make women's wool bathing suits at least a nickel cheaper.

B-36 Smear Laid to Glenn Martin

By Drew Pearson

Last spring damning accusations were made in the House of Representatives impugning the patriotism of high defense officials regarding the airplane in which the Nation was placing much of its confidence—the B-36.

Van Zandt

The Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson, and the Secretary of Air, Stuart Symington, it was charged, had ordered the B-36 because Johnson had previously been employed by Floyd Odlum, manufacturer of the B-36; while Symington had been wined and dined by Odlum. It was also alleged that Symington's former company—Emerson Electric of St. Louis—had profited unethically at the expense of the taxpayers in manufacturing gun turrets for the B-29.

These charges naturally shake the confidence of the country in its high officials responsible for national defense. Several weeks have passed and it remains important to know what was behind these charges and whether they were true.

This column can now state that the origin of the congressional attacks was an anonymous sheet first circulated by Glenn L. Martin, president of the Glenn L. Martin Co., of Baltimore, well-known manufacturer of Navy planes.

The memo attacking Johnson and Symington was shown by Martin to other airplane manufacturers who also wanted Air Force business, and who were being left out in the cold because the Air Force had switched to the B-36. Later the same memo, with some additions, turned up on Capitol Hill, where it obviously became the source material for the attacks delivered by Congressman Jimmy Van Zandt, Pennsylvania Republican, a Naval Reserve captain.

The wording of Van Zandt's speech was somewhat different, though in places it was almost identical.

For example, the smear memo said.

"In 1947 the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation was in financial straits. Its principal assets was a contract for 100 B-36 aircraft. There was doubt that the contract would be completed."

In contrast, Van Zandt said:

"In 1947 the Consolidated Vultee Corporation held contracts for 100 B-36 bombers. At that time there was considerable doubt as to whether the contracts would ever be validated."

Glenn Martin's tactics in talking to other airplane manufacturers failed. They did not join him. Meanwhile, the reason for his desperation can be found in his own ledger sheets. In 1948 his company showed a loss of $16,710,762, on top of which it still owes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation $16,372,521, payable in September 1950. The company's financial statement also contains this illuminating disclosure:

"An operating profit from military sales was offset by losses in the commercial airplane program . . ." In other words Martin's only profit was made from Uncle Sam, and he lost money on non-Government business.

Since all this happened, Glenn Martin has been quietly eased out of the presidency of his company into the less active job of chairman of the board.

Symington's Record

One of the statements made by Congressman Van Zandt was that Symington's Emerson Electric Corp. had been renegotiated on its B-29 gun-turret contracts in 1948 by Col. Franklin Wolfe of the Air Force, who whitewashed the company, thus costing United States taxpayers 20 million dollars.

This was a rumor which this columnist heard in 1945, at the time Symington first entered the Government as War Assets Administrator. Upon investigation, this columnist became convinced there was nothing to the charge. Symington had a fine record at Emerson Electric of which he can be proud.

Furthermore, Congressman Van Zandt's smear is obviously false since Colonel Wolfe retired from the Army in 1945, so he could not have renegotiated the Emerson contract in 1948.

Admirals Transferred

Interesting to note is the fact that Vice Admiral A. W. Radford, former Deputy Chief of Naval Operations in charge of air, and vigorous crusader against the B-36, has been moved out to Hawaii. Also the Navy's former press chief, Rear Admiral Edward Ewen, another tireless propagandist against the B-36, has been moved to Guam—not an active area for press relations.

Also interesting: Glenn Martin's front man on Capitol Hill was Harold Mosher, former Congressman from Ohio and a Republican. Mosher is a close friend and distant relative of Congressman Clarence Brown, also of Ohio, one of the leaders of the Republican Party in the House. Significantly, the first Congressman to attack the B-36 was Lobbyist Mosher's cousin, Clarence Brown.

Another rooter for Glenn Martin has been Senator Tydings of Maryland. He has talked to the Air Force about buying planes from Martin, who is one of his constituents.
